Confession Of Pal a Lie, Suspect in Killing Vows

Both Are Held For Grand Jury In Murder of D. C. Drug Store Owner

One of the accused slayers of Nathaniel Johnson, 53-year-old druggist, took the stand yesterday at a coroner's inquest to protest his innocence.

Calm and deliberate, Lawrence Goodall, 24, of 412 Oakdale pl. nw., looked upon his alleged confederate, Edward Jackson, jr., 25, of 364 Dixon ct. sw., almost with a manner of pity as he said:

"Jackson is a great friend of mine. The police have enticed him to lie against himself and me."

Both Charged With Murder

Police have charged both with murder, claiming Goodall was the gunman who shot down Johnson Tuesday night in his drug store, 600 3d st. sw., while Jackson was posted outside as a lookout.

Goodall, who police say was released from the Army only last Friday, has a police record of 16 arrests dating back to 1937. Jackson's record shows nine arrests dating back to 1939.

During the inquest, which resulted in the pair being held for the action of the grand jury, Jackson wept and sobbed hysterically.

Goodall took the stand to make a statement, something unusual at a coroner's inquest for a man charged with murder, and he said of Jackson:

"He is a great guy as anybody can tell you. He has a criminal record all over the country. He is a rough, tough and great fellow and the reason he cried just now is because of the injustice he is doing himself and me by lying about this case."

Insists on Statement

Before Goodall took the stand, Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy warned him three times that it was his right not to testify. But Goodall, who was not represented by counsel, insisted on making a statement. To guard his rights, Dr. Murphy refused to permit Goodall to be cross-examined after he had made his statement.

The first witness at the inquest was Detective Sergt. George W. Cooke of the homicide squad, who related details of a confession police said was made Wednesday by Jackson.

The detective said Jackson told police he had known Goodall since 1941, and on the day of the murder, they were drinking at Jackson's house.

He said that, according to Jackson's story, they left the house and at one point paused in front of a liquor store, at 900 4th st. sw., and discussed whether they should hold it up.

Cooke said Jackson told police he advised against the project because the people in the liquor store knew him.

Then, according to the alleged statement detailed by Cooke, the pair bought and drank a bottle of wine and after that went to a tavern and drank some beer.

Cooke said that Jackson then said this was what followed:

They walked in front of Johnson's drug store sometime later and again the subject of a holdup

Barbers Indorse $1 Haircuts but Boost Shave Cost

District barbers have voted not to increase the price of haircuts.

However, they're going to dig a little deeper—into your pocketbook—for a shave. It'll cost you 75 cents instead of 50, beginning November 1.

Charles Bovello, secretary-treasurer of the Journeyman Cosmetologists and Proprietors International Union of America's Local 239, said nearly 450 members met at the Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., to hear the result of the secret ballot. The barbers voted 353 to 145 in favor of keeping haircuts down to $1. They voted 429 to 72 for a boost in shaves.

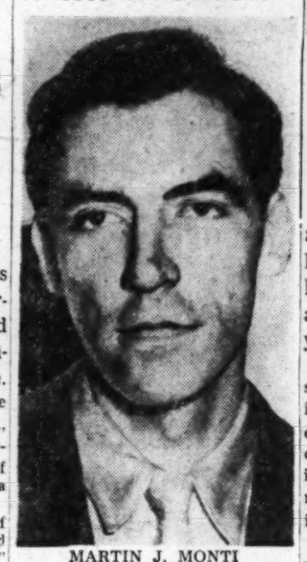
Former U. S. Flier Charged With Treason



MARTIN J. MONTI

Accused as traitor

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—A former Air Force lieutenant was charged with treason today in a Federal grand jury indictment which alleged he gave himself up to the Germans and subsequently broadcast for the Nazis.

Named in the indictment was former Lieutenant Martin J. Monti, 27, of Florissant, Mo. He has been held in the Federal house of detention here since last January 26 when he was discharged from service at Mitchel Field.

Special Assistant Attorney General Victor Woerheide said the indictment, listing 21 allegedly

Meat Prices Tumble Here 1 to 30 Cents

Limited Drops Lead To Belief Current Skid Has Hit Bottom

Across-the-counter meat prices tumbled again yesterday, with markdowns ranging from one to 30 cents a pound on some items

Affected primarily were hams, veal cutlets, chuck roasts, loin veal chops, rib veal chops, pork roasts, pork shoulders and ground beef.

United States good grade veal cutlets were cut by one food chain from $1.19 to 89 cents.

In other price drops, pork roasts fell from 79 to 67 cents, loin veal chops from 99 to 79 cents, rib veal chops from 89 to 69 cents, chuck roasts from 59 to 49 cents and ground beef from 63 to 59 cents.

Hams Drop 9-12 Cents

Many area stores slashed their ready-to-eat and smoked hams 9 to 12 cents, advertising them today and Saturday at 59 to 63 cents a pound.

Yesterday's price fall was more limited than the one last week, indicating, according to many chain meat buyers here, that the current skid had hit bottom.

Last week's general price break affected more than 30 different retail meat items, and many items affected last week, such as steaks, showed no further decline yesterday.

The buyer for one grocery chain—to kill any hope the housewife may have of permanently lower food bills—predicted an upswing in many meat prices, some up to 4 and 5 cents, beginning next week.

Farmers Stopped Selling

The upswing, he said, will reflect this week's rally on the Midwestern livestock and hog markets, where wholesale meat-on-the-hoof had advanced from 1 to 2 cents during the past few days.

Farmers, he said, began withholding animals from the market when the prices fell and, with this year's abundant grain production, they know they can keep animals without too much inconvenience until prices go up again.

This don't-get-too-hopeful attitude was reflected in food industry comment from over the Nation.

The Institute of Food Distribution, a research organization, called expectations of lower food prices "a temporary state of mind," and in New York and Philadelphia

8-Billion Foreign Aid Bill Foreseen

1½-Billion Arms For Europe Due to Raise Next Year's Sum Over '49 Total

The next Congress may be asked for more than eight billion dollars for recovery, relief and military aid programs abroad in the coming fiscal year.

This compares with just under seven billion authorized for spending abroad in the fiscal year that ends June 30. The increase is accounted for by the cost of rearming western European nations, estimated now at about $1,500,000,000 in the new fiscal year.

The Bureau of the Budget is now working on the request that President Truman will make immediately after the new Congress assembles. Budget planners representing Gov. Thomas E. Dewey are keeping in close touch with the bureau in the budget-making process.

Although a Republican administration probably would slash domestic items in President Truman's final budget, officials here hope and believe that the foreign aid estimates will not be materially changed if the Republicans win the election.

The biggest item will be the second year's request for the European Recovery Program, which is expected to run above four billion dollars. It will rise half a billion above this figure if the Economic Cooperation Administration takes over Army aid programs in occupied areas.

The next biggest item, as it looks now, will be the $1,500,000,000 for military aid to Western Europe. Economic and military aid to China is expected to cost 700 million, as compared with 400 million this year. The Army also will need about a billion for outright relief in Germany, Japan and the Ryukyu Islands, unless ECA takes over some of this expenditure.

Although the present Congress was cool to requests for reconstruction funds for Japan, present tentative plans call for 225 million dollars for this purpose, as compared with 75 million this year. The request for Greek-Turkish military aid is expected to reach 175 million, as compared with 225 million approved by Congress this year.

Marshall Plan Halts Communism, SaysHoffman

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Paul G. Hoffman, economic cooperation administrator, said tonight "the Marshall Plan has not only stopped the march of communism but has turned the tide in the other direction." He added that western Europe was working together "as never befo.e in history."

Hoffman, home from Europe today, said if western European countries remain "free nations" and stay united with America, "we can, I believe, be sure that no aggressor will march against us."

Steel production in European Recovery Program countries, Hoffman said, was running 6 per cent ahead of schedule this year and 27 per cent more than in 1947.

He said there were notable gains in French and Italian bread rations, German fats and oils rationing, operations of French refineries and Italian railways, and European production of fertilizer.

Horner Says Marshall Can't Give Him Orders

Paris, Oct. 14 (AP).—Arthur Horner, Communist general secretary of the British Mine Workers Union, said today United States Secretary of State Marshall had asked Will Lawther, president of the British miners, to take a stand against the French coal strike.

"I disagree with Lawther," Horner said. "I don't take any orders from General Marshall."

In London, Lawther said "it is just plain daft for him (Horner) to suggest that because I was at a lunch where Mr. Marshall spoke that that governs my views."

He added he did not take orders "as to my thoughts or actions from any outside source."

Marshall could not be reached immediately for comment.

Horner said Lawther, Marshall and Leon Jouhaux, head of the French non-Communist union workers force, had luncheon together recently.

Quick Action Averts Disaster

Baker's Alarm Arouses Town As Gas Fills Homes in Night

Warren, Pa., Oct. 14 (AP).—Baker Lowell McCann's quick action today probably saved this town of 14,891 inhabitants from disaster.

At 2 a. m., McCann noticed the gas flames in his bread ovens had flickered out. Ten minutes later gas again hissed through the pipes—unlighted.

McCann reasoned that many unattended gas appliances in the slumbering city might be pouring unburnt gas into homes.

He called Fire Chief Charles Albaugh. Fire trucks, police cars and ambulances sped through the darkened streets, sirens screaming. A sound truck blared, "check your gas. Check your gas."

Albaugh said the alarm saved many lives. He said his men found about 200 gas-filled homes. Albaugh personally awakened "at least 50" groggy citizens. No one was overcome.

"I expected to find 50 or more dead," Albaugh declared, "McCann's prompt report undoubtedly saved many from gas asphyxiation."

Clay Says Firmness Can Force Reds Back

By Wes Gallagher

Berlin, Oct. 14 (AP).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay was reported tonight to have said in a private talk recently that a firm stand by the Western powers in Berlin can lead to the breakup of Soviet relations in eastern Europe.

A responsible source close to the American commander in Germany made public a speech in which Clay gave his views on the future of the Berlin crisis.

The talk was delivered privately to delegates of the British parliamentary conference who visited Berlin September 28.

Clay disclosed then that the Western powers tried to buy food from Poland and Czechoslovakia for the besieged German capital, but this was blocked by Russia.

Clay expressed belief lasting peace in Europe could be reached if the Western powers refused to yield to the Soviet Union.

"Soviet expansion will not only be halted," he said. 'It will recede."

He brought up the Soviet blockade of Berlin and said:

"While this was alleged to be a safeguard to the currency, our willingness to buy food from Poland and Czechoslovakia, which we were willing to do, was made impossible. This was a definite indication the blockade was placed into effect as a starvation measure . . . to drive the Allies out of Berlin."

Clay added:

"During the past year we have seen the rise of democratic forces

Italian Communist Threatens General Strike on State Pay

Rome, Oct. 14 (AP).—Italy's Communist labor chief, Giuseppe di Vittorio, today threatened the nation with a seven-million-man general strike unless the government satisfies demands of striking state workers.

More than one million government employes, considered a center or right-of-center white collar class, were called out today for one to nine hours to support their demands for higher wages and other benefits.

In Rome, however, where a large part of the government employes work, all but the ministry of posts and telegraphs reported a majority of their people stayed on the job.

The ministry of interior said that in the provinces, too, most government offices were well staffed.

Di Vittorio made his threat at a mass meeting of about 10,000 state employes in Rome.

Italy also faced the possibility of a complete tie-up of all public transport except the railroads. The National Federation of Bus, Shortline Railway and Streetcar Workers called for a nation-wide walkout of indefinite duration beginning Monday, to support demands for higher pay.

The state workers are demanding higher pay, larger pensions and reclassification for promotion and pension purposes.

Commonwealth Nations Plan Worldwide Union Against Reds

London, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Behind the scenes of the British Commonwealth conference here, it was learned today, leaders of the Commonwealth Nations have opened a drive to form a powerful worldwide "balancing force" against communism.

This program has been agreed on in secret talks, it was understood, and aims at the creation of a new Western-Eastern union stretching from Europe through Africa to the Far East. Such a union would provide a girdle of defense for the West and form a buffer between the main forces of East and West.

As now outlined, the program would consolidate a total population of 500 million on the side of the Western powers.

One of the chief aims of this conference is to keep India from proclaiming herself a republic, thus leaving herself open as the next victim in the Communist "fifth column" drive in the Far East.

Secondly, they want to bring Burma back into the Commonwealth. Burma broke away a year ago, and since then the nation has been torn by Communist-organized violence.

Lorraine Miners Start Work In First Break in French Strike

Paris, Oct. 14 (NYHT).—French coal miners in Lorraine went back to work in what was reported to be substantial numbers today, as the government intensified its war against food profiteers to bring down inflated living costs.

This break in the front of the nation-wide coal strike, which started October 4, came as the non-Communist Force Ouvriere Trade Union announced it was planning to launch a back-to-work movement in the strike-bound mines of northern France Saturday.

Noel Sinot, head of the Force Ouvriere Miners' Federation, said it would renew its efforts for a referendum on the original coal strike vote. Sinot was sure a majority of the miners were ready to return if the government reassured the r. living costs would be steadily reduced.

The Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor (CGT), whose annual congress closes here Friday, is expected to disperse its delegates with instructions to "redouble" strike agitation next week.

One objective is said to be to keep the Marshall Plan in constant confusion. The other is to force the resignation of Premier Queuille's non-Communist government so the French Communist party can get back into important cabinet posts it resigned during strikes in May, 1947.

There was additional evidence the Queuille cabinet considered the Cominform had a helping hand in the determination of the CGT to keep the strikes going for political ends.

The Ministry of Interior, confirmed the Moscow announcement that Russian trade unionists had been refused French visas to attend the current CGT congress. Jules Moch, interior minister, said the Russian visa applications were for one month, whereas the CGT congress was only a five-day affair.

Reds Start Move To Oust Spaak's Belgium Regime

Brussels, Belgium, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—An informant in the Belgian counter-intelligence service said today the Cominform had instructed the Belgian Communist Party to "do everything in its power" to overthrow the government of Premier Paul-Henri Spaak.

He said the central committee of the Belgian Communist Party also had been told to start agitation for higher wages.

The informant said there was proof the wage agitation move is linked with similar movements in France and Italy.

Three days ago Edgard Lalmand, secretary general of the Belgian Communist Party, advocated the overthrow of the Socialist-Conservative coalition. He said Spaak was "nothing but a puppet, and a slave, of his American masters in Washington."

At this point one of the audience stood on his chair and said:

"I will gladly sacrifice my life so that Spaak may die."

Spaak is to speak here next Wednesday Lalmand said: "We will all turn up for Spaak's address."

100 Rounded Up In Brazil Probe Of 'Soviet Spying'

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 14 (AP).—More than 100 persons have been rounded up in an investigation of alleged Soviet spying in various states of Brazil.

Brazil outlawed the Communist Party and broke relations with the Soviet Union last year.

The latest arrests were in Sao Paulo Tuesday. Twelve persons of Slavic origin were apprehended and several crates of what police called Russian propaganda were seized.

The center of this group was described as "the Red Star Society" headquarters. This place and the former headquarters of "The Slavic Union," "Society to Aid Russian War Victims" and "the Molotov Society" are being checked from time to time by police.

Sao Paulo police announced recently a spy network is being investigated in the southern state of Rio de Grande de Sul and more arrests are expected there. More than 20 have already been picked up there.

Dewey Tells Kansas City Of Good Rule

Reminds Audience It Was Stronghold Of Boss Pendergast, Sponsor of Truman

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Reporter

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 14.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, wooing the voters of President Truman's own Missouri, made a "good government" speech here tonight.

It was a speech that ascended to a new high level for the Republican standard bearer, one that sparkled with such words as "teamwork," "noble," "competence," "vision," "faith" and "courage."

Woven adroitly into the lofty rhetoric, however, were two smashing paragraphs that reminded Governor Dewey's radio audience that this was the stronghold of the late Boss Tom Pendergast, political sponsor of Mr. Truman.

"It seems particularly appropriate to talk about good government here in Kansas City," he said. "You have known how bad a bad government can be. You rose up and threw it out and you know how good a good government can be . . .

No Magic Formula

"There is no magic formula for competent administration. But one thing is certain. You will never get it when positions of high authority go to men simply because they tell funny stories or because they are somebody's friends or because they are supposed to have some special influence over some bloc of votes."

Governor Dewey mentioned no names. Obviously, however, he must have had in mind Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, the President's Army aide, as one of the storytellers, and also, perhaps, George H. Allen, long a White House favorite and for a time an officer in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Under the heading of "Old Friends" might come Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder and James K. Vardaman, once Mr. Truman's naval aide, now a member of the Federal Reserve Board.

14,000 Jam Auditorium

A crowd of 14,000, made up of Republicans from all over Missouri and Kansas, jammed the Municipal Auditorium to hear the Republican standard-bearer tonight. Cheering and the ringing of cowbells created a bedlam as he appeared on the platform with Mrs. Dewey.

On the way to Kansas City, Governor Dewey was greeted by friendly crowds in the Ozark country and all along the line in Missouri.

Politicians, who boarded the "Dewey Victory Special," said that they didn't put too much stock in a Gallup poll that showed Mr. Truman far ahead in the "Show Me" State.

They said that Missouri was a true battleground this year, and might go either way on November 2.

Evokes Howl of Laughter

Governor Dewey, in his speech here tonight, evoked a howl of laughter when he told the crowd tonight that a good government speech was particularly appropriate here in Kansas City.

He was vigorously applauded when he promised to wage peace vigorously so that "our sons will not have to fight in another war."

Getting down to his thesis, he said that he knew something about teamwork in government and he added that it wasn't always easy.

"Sometimes," he said, "it is hard work to get men and women of independent minds and honest convictions to work together as a team. It takes patience and open-mindedness.

"It requires the ability to give and take. Teamwork calls for frank discussion, calls for a burning faith in the importance and necessity of good government.

"We are going to have that kind of a team in Washington."

Governor Dewey was repeatedly interrupted throughout his speech. It was doubtful if he ever had a more appreciative audience, and this in the city that Mr. Truman calls a "suburb" of his home town of Independence, 10 miles away.

There was derisive laughter as Governor Dewey described the Contributions Top 14% of Chest Goal

Community Chest campaign workers reported yesterday that 14.81 per cent of the 1949 goal, or $676,511.47, has been contributed to date. The announcement was made at the Chest's second general report luncheon held in the Washington Hotel.

At the first luncheon Monday, volunteers announced 3.41 per cent of the Chest's $4,566,790 goal was filled.

Government Unit workers lead the nine units of the Chest Federation, reporting gifts of $492,875.19 or 32.33 per cent of their quota so far. The Residential and Alexandria Units each reported 16.5 per cent of their goals filled, with contributions of about $80,000 and about $12,000, respectively.

Dr. James A. Gannon, District surgeon and member of the Board of Education here, warned volunteers of the increasingly desperate need of the 14 local hospitals, depending on the Chest's hospitalization fund.

"Last year the cost of each patient per day was $7.50. This year it is $11.00," he told the meeting. "This extra money must be collected if we are to prevent epidemics, suffering and death."

Dr. Gannon pointed out that doctors contribute their services free to patients being aided by Community Chest funds.

Edward J. Keyes, director of the Community Chest Federation, announced that the Hospitalization Fund will have to reduce payments to participating hospitals for the rest of the year because of a fund shortage due to the failure of the 1948 Chest to reach its goal.

Unless an unlikely decrease occurs in demands on the fund,

ITU Is Ruled In Contempt On Shop Issue

Held Illegally Trying To Keep Union Bars; Open Contract Ordered

Indianapolis, Oct. 14 (AP).—Federal Judge Luther M. Swygert held the International Typographical Union in contempt of court today and ordered the union not to ask contracts that discriminate against hiring nonunion printers.

He ruled the union had evaded his injunction against violating the Taft-Hartley law and was trying illegally to maintain a closed shop.

The judge told the ITU and its top four officers to be in court within 10 days to show that they are following his instructions given out today.

Costs Only Penalty

There was no penalty, other than court costs, for contempt.

Woodruff Randolph is president of the international union.

Counsel for the National Labor Relations Board, which had asked the original injunction, had also asked for the contempt citation and had not requested a penalty.

Today's citation centered on a document sent out by the ITU to its locals.

It was headed "Contract Provisions Which May Be Proposed in Collective Bargaining During Pendency of Federal Court Decree" and was called a "form contract."

This document was sent out after Judge Swygert had handed down his injunction on March 27. It provides, among other things, that only journeymen printers may be employed.

"Form Contract" Cited

The decision cites that the "form contract" provides for a test for nonunion men to determine whether they are competent, but there is no test for union men nor are they required to be trained or experienced as printers.

The proposed contract is "thus discriminatory in regard to hire on the basis of membership in the union," and is in violation of the Taft-Hartley law, the judge ruled. He ordered the union to tell its members not to use the "form contract" any further.

Commenting on the good faith of the union, the judge wrote:

"But despite the respondents' protestations of good faith efforts

Judge Rules on Suit

Fate of Patterson Millions Rests on Whole Will's Validity

By Murrey Marder

Post Reporter

Fate of Eleanor Patterson's $16,586,571 will must rest on its validity as a whole under the suit brought by her daughter, Countess Felicia Gizycka, District Court Judge James W. Morris ruled yesterday.

The executors of the will won indications of an early trial date in the contest, but Louis G. Caldwell, one of the executors' attorneys, estimated that because of notice required for interested parties the trial cannot begin before November 25.

In opposing any "unreasonable haste" in setting the trial, Harold A. Kertz, an attorney for the countess, declared in court that the executors are "undoubtedly ready right now to go to trial," but:

Atom Pulled Into Politics By Dewey, Truman Says

GOP for Private Exploitation, He Asserts; Still Hopes For World Control

By Robert C. Albright

Post Reporter

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 14.—President Truman tonight accused Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of dragging atomic energy into politics and said his GOP opponent favors "private exploitation" of the atom.

He proposed instead that the Government retain its monopoly in the entire atom field for the foreseen future and "as long as safety and the people's interest require."

And he said he has not yet abandoned hope of working out effective international controls, even though Russia has blocked every effort to date.

But the United States will never make a "one-sided" sacrifice, he stressed.

"The United States will not be satisfied with anything less than a plan of international control which is clearly meant to work. A 'make-believe' control would be worse than none."

Ought Not to Be in Politics

Speaking at an open air rally in Milwaukee's Borchert Field, the President said atomic energy "ought not be in politics" but Governor Dewey forced him to speak up by his "dangerous lack of understanding on the subject."

He said Dewey in his Phoenix, Ariz., speech "clearly implied a belief that there should be private exploitation of a tremendous asset which belongs to the people of the United States.

"He blundered into a subject which is of immediate concern to every person in the United States and in the world," Mr. Truman said. Then he nailed down his charge.

"It is clear from the comments of the Republican candidate," he said, "that powerful, selfish groups within the Republican Party are determined to exploit the atom for private profit. I shall fight this effort with all my strength . . ."

Wallace There First

Ten thousand persons piled into Milwaukee's floodlighted ballpark to hear the speech, following a parade through crowded streets from the depot. Henry Wallace preceded Mr. Truman into town. Their paths did not cross. Mr. Wallace addressed another audience in the Milwaukee Auditorium.

Mr. Truman was loudly cheered at his constant aim to prevent use of atomic energy for war and hasten its use for peace. They cheered again when he said the weapon "must be placed beyond the reach of any irresponsible government or any power-mad dictator."

He got his best hands when, after denouncing Dewey's position,

Heiress Prefers Husband to Wealth Attorney Says

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Attractive Mrs. Danise Weiskopf Reid would rather keep her husband than have a $30,000 annual income from her father's estate.

Samson Selig, Mrs. Reid's attorney, said today his client would "rather lose everything" than divorce Robert H. Reid.

Mrs. Reid is the daughter of Daniel K. Weiskopf, distillery executive, who died last March.

Weiskopf left his daughter the income from a third share of his $2,500,000 estate on condition she divorce her husband. If she declined, he directed that she receive $2500 a year. The income from one third of the estate is estimated at $30,000 annually.

Reid is a television executive with a "fairish amount of money," Selig said, but his income is much less than the $30,000 his wife could get by divorcing him.

The Reids were married in 1944 while Reid, then an Army Air Force captain, was home on leave from the Aleutians.

PEOPLE In The NEWS

By Sam Stavisky

Woodruff Randolph, Leader of Union Printers, Attacks Head-On in Fighting for Their Cause

There are few printers who are not familiar with the time-honored tradition of putting the paper to bed, that is, tucking in an edition for the press run.

But there is probably but one printer who follows a custom of putting a problem to bed, that is, going to bed with the problem and not getting up until he comes up with the answer.

That unique printer is reputed to be Woodruff Randolph, chunky, grey-haired president of the International Typographical Union (AFL), who, together with his union and fellow officers, was held in contempt of court yesterday for violation of an injunction involving the ITU's bitter fight against the Taft-Hartley Act.

Once Randolph has unscrambled his mental pie-box and come up with the answer, he sticks to it unswervingly, unflinchingly, unalterably. Such is the combined opinion of his friends and foes in and out of the craft union.

Thus it was that when Randolph decided to battle the Taft-Hartley Act—which bans the ITU's sacred closed shop policy—he attacked head on. As a result, even though the ITU with its 89,000 members is a relatively small union, it has nonetheless borne the brunt of organized labor's attack on the act in terms of strikes and strife.

Oldest National Union

The oldest national union in this country—founded in 1852—the printers have long been conservative in their approach to management-union problems. Randolph's tactics have aroused increasing opposition within the ITU, and in the latest election of officers, carried out by referendun last May, his margin of victory was three to two over John R. Evans of Washington.

The Independent Party of the union, backing Evans, campaigned on a platform calling for "peace, harmony and order," and opposed Randolph's policies.

However, at the convention which followed the referendum, the delegates from the ITU's 845 locals backed their president down the line and gave him more authority than any president ever has had in this fiercely democratic union.

The 56-year-old labor leader, son of a carpenter, is a native of Warrenton, Mo. He entered the printing craft right out of high school, went to law school nights, won admission to the bar.

Began Career in Chicago

He began his union career with the Chicago local, was elected national secretary-treasurer in 1928 and held that post for 16 years, his table-thumping arguments influencing and at times dominating the leadership of the union's Progressive Party. He accumulated prestige, and more influence, as secretary-treasurer of the Union Printers Home and as editor of the Typographical Journal.

When C. P. Howard, ITU president and titular Progressive Party leader, swung over to the newly formed CIO in 1936, the ITU refused to follow, and elected an Independent. But Randolph, the Progressive, was reelected secretary-treasurer. He became president in 1944.

In Indianapolis, ITU headquarters city, Randolph is known as a homebody. He is married, has three children, is a Royal Arch Mason.

In court, he'll bang his palm on the arm of the chair, or aim his index finger at the judge, to stress a point. When attentive, but not perturbed, he'll twirl the key hanging from his vest. But when needled, he may explode.

Unspectacular until he emerged to do battle with the Taft-Hartley Act (which he calls a "slave labor" law), Randolph has proved to be a vigorous and articulate speaker. He picks his words carefully.

Last year, for example, he told the ITU convention that it wasn't necessary for the printers to explain to their employers why they were going out on strike, and thereby avoid getting involved with the Taft-Hartley law.

The printers could assure the employers, Randolph said, that they were only doing "what comes naturally."

ITU Is Held In Contempt

to comply with the decree, a consideration of all the evidence convinces the court that the respondents have deliberately attempted since the issuance of the injunction to accomplish the objective against which the injunction was directed, namely, the continuance of closed-shop conditions in the newspaper industry."

The union claimed a victory on some points in today's decision, which it said it would appeal.

Henry Kaiser, an ITU attorney in Washington, pointed out that the court had not granted a request by NLRB counsel that the ITU be ordered to quit making strike benefit payments to printers in Chicago who have been out for 11 months.

Kaiser said the NLRB general counsel had failed in a "shameful attempt to break the Chicago strike." He said he would ask Judge Swygert at a conference Monday in South Bend, Ind., to withhold enforcement of the latest decree until the case could be appealed.

The ITU case on which today's ruling was based was filed last January by Robert N. Denham, NLRB general counsel. Lengthy hearings resulted in the injunction, violation of which led to today's contempt citation.

The eventual ruling will affect labor negotiations between the printers and 800 newspapers. There was no immediate reaction from the publisher groups, pending study of the citation text.

Forty-six ITU strikes are now in progress against newspapers—38 in the United States, 7 in Canada and I in Alaska.

Contract negotiations to settle the strike against the five Chicago newspapers have been held from time to time since the printers left their jobs November 24, 1947.

The union rejected the last proposal by the publishers September 16. The union also had rejected a suggestion by the publishers that binding arbitration be used to settle their differences.

The union has contended the issue is wages. The publishers have contended the issue is that the union has insisted on an illegal closed-shop contract.

An NLRB examiner also has ruled the union has demanded an illegal closed-shop contract.

Since the typesetters left, the newspapers have been publishing by a photo-engraving process. A dummy page is made up from material printed on a Varityper, which resembles a typewriter. A zinc engraving is made of this, and it takes the place of the usual page-form of type.

The ITU officials named in today's citation are Woodruff Randolph, president; Larry Taylor and Elmer Brown, vice presidents, and Don Hurd, secretary-treasurer.

Tobin Hikes Minimum Pay For Textiles

By The Associated Press

Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin yesterday more than doubled the wage minimum required to be paid by the textile industry to workers employed on Government contracts.

He boosted it from 40 to 87 cents ar hour.

Tobin said 87 cents is the prevailing wage minimum being paid in the industry, which employs about 800,000 workers.

What the decision means is this: Any mill making cloth or other textiles for the Government (under a contract amounting to more than $10,000) must pay its workers at least 87 cents an hour.

The ruling takes on added importance at this time because of the growing Government requirements for cloth to be used in outfitting the armed forces. The Government is buying uniforms and a variety of other items, including tents, parachutes, surgical bandages, bagging, towels, sheets and other articles.

The Secretary acted on the basis of evidence presented at a hearing here July 8 by industry and labor representatives.

Tobin has the power under the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act to determine the prevailing minimum wage for workers engaged in manufacturing or supplying materials for the Government under contracts of over $10,000.

Telephone Firm's Negotiations Broken Off as Unions Reject Wage Offers

Wage negotiations between the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. and its union traffic, clerical and maintenance employes broke off last night, with the union rejecting the company's last-minute wage offers.

The negotiations, held simultaneously with other union-Bell System negotiations in 18 other cities, ended abruptly with a midnight deadline.

Glenn Watts, president of Division 36, Communications Workers of America (Ind.), and Mrs. Mary Gannon, president of the union's Division 50, announced after all-evning conferences that their unions next step had not been determined.

Division 36 represents plant, accounting and commercial employes, and Division 50 represents the company's traffic department workers.

In New York, other negotiations were being held by the American Union of Telephone Workers (CIO), involving about 25,000 long-distance workers over the Nation, but a statement on the outcome there was not immediately forthcoming.

With failure of last night's negotiations, both the union and the company can terminate the present contracts next May under terms of a reopening clause under which the wage issue was raised.

The present Chesapeake & Potomac contract with the Communications Workers is scheduled to run for three years.

F. G. Macarow, C. & P. vice president and general manager, said the company's final offer provided $2 to $4 weekly increases for operators and clerical employes and $2 to $6 for craft employes.

Watts, president of Division 36, however, said the offer to his union ranged from $1 to $6 and that his union was willing to accept a $3 to $6 increase with "proper distribution." He said the company refused the compromise.

Watts said 19 workers would have been affected by the $1 offer, 790 by the $2, 931 by the $3, 208 by the $4, 300 by the $5 and 1330 by the $6, but that the union felt it could not sacrifice higher boosts to the lower-bracket employes.

In her statement, Mrs. Gannon said the company's offer to her division was predicated upon new wage schedules which was unfavorable to her union and that, although the company's minimum increase was announced as $2, actually 1500 operators would have received less than a $2 increase.

The local negotiations, held at the Washington Hotel, affected more than 6000 telephone workers within the District of Columbia.

The telephone company, following the negotiations breakoff, issued a statement defending its final offer as comparing "favorably with those paid by other businesses in Washington for work requiring similar skills and training."

The statement said, under the offer, two thirds of its craft employes would have received the maximum $6 increase and 40 per cent of its operators the $4 increase.

Over the Nation, 225,000 telephone workers were involved in the wage negotiations, but reports of the final outcome in the various cities were trickling in slowly at the Communications Workers of America headquarters here.

ITU 1st to Feel Impact Of T-H Law, Tobin States

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin said tonight that the International Typographical Union "is only the first union to feel the impact of the Taft-Hartley law."

Tobin, en route to Waterloo, Iowa, where he was to speak tonight, said the Federal Court ruling which convicted the ITU of contempt of court is "evidence of how harsh the Taft-Hartley law is against labor."

He said he expects more court action against labor unions shortly. "The National Association of Manufacturers has had the 'go slow' sign up until after the election," he said.

Shipping Leaders Map Building Plan

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

New York, Oct. 14.—America's shipping leaders today mapped plans for a billion dollar, three-year ship construction program to bolster the Nation's declining merchant marine.

Frazier A. Bailey, president of the National Federation of American Shipping, outlined to reporters a 12-point plan for additional Government aid to the industry to build up the shipping industry and enable it to handle the proposed new buildnig program. He predicted that something like it will be adopted by the American Merchant Marine Conference meeting here this week, for presentation to Congress in January.

Program Includes 150 Ships

The building program includes some 150 passenger liners, tankers, cargo craft, ore carriers, and special types, said Samuel D. Schell, vicep resident of the federation. A majority will be built with private funds, he said, while others must have some Federal subsidy.

Earlier, F. P. Foisie, president of the West Coast Waterfront Employers Association declared that the Pacific Coast shipping strike is a struggle for "survival" between shipping and communism.

Flying East to address the conference, Foisie told the group We've had enough." "Further appeasement is impossible," he said. "To 'compromise' with Communists is just a soft way of yielding to implacable purpose."

Here are the main points of the shipping revival plan.

1. Immediate and vigorous action by the Government to protect American shipping against discriminatory practices recently adopted by several South American and European nations.

2. Strict enforcement of the law requiring that American ships carry 50 per cent of ECA cargoes coupled with other means to assist United States shipping to carry half of our foreign trade.

3. Bar the restoration of the Japanese and German merchant fleets, and limit both former enemies to domestic shipping and a very limited foreign trade fleets.

4. Lower Panama Canal tolls to encourage revival of the depleted American intercoastal lines.

5. Adoption of a new basis for fixing ship subsidies, to take into account pegged foreign currencies and allow for higher United States safety and sanitation standards.

Other Legislative Proposals

Other legislative proposals in the plan would lower the trade-in age of ships, reduce interest rates on money owed the Government and permit faster amortization of money invested in ships.

Bailey said the conference, sponsored by the Propeller Club of the United States, probably will not ask removal of the present 50 per cent ceiling on construction subsidies—a proposal advanced yesterday by Robert C. Lee, Moore-McCormack Line vice president.

Vice Admiral William W. Smith, chairman of the Maritime Commission, defended the commission and the industry against recent criticism—in a Washington Post Series on the Merchant Marine—that they lacked strong leadership.

Tossing aside his prepared speech, Smith told more than 1000 shipping leaders at a luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria that shipowners had shown courage in planning new ships under present conditions and that the Government had launched ambitious plans for new construction.

During the morning session, on the other hand, Vice Admiral Earle W. Mills, chief of the Navy Bureau of Ships, declared in a prepared speech that he concurred "fully" in the conclusions of The Post series that "stronger leadership, additional Government financial support and some radically new ideas in shipbuilding are the chief needs of the American merchant marine today."

Mills urged that more "powerful molders of public opinion, like the strong newspapers of this country" should interest themselves in the ills of the merchant marine.

"The merchant marine," said Mills, " is the backbone of logistic support for sea-air power."

Frank J. Taylor, president of the American Merchant Marine Institute, told the group that unless stable labor relations are established in the maritime industry, the Nation's merchant fleet will be driven from the seas.

Speaking at the same labor panel, Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union (CIO), noting that his union had cleaned out Communists from its top ranks, said that the NMU's "primary interest" is to "cooperate with all right thinking people to rejuvenate the maritime industry." He warned that if employers do not also cooperate, the Communists may regain their former position in the maritime unions.

By The Associated Press

The CIO's "cold war" between left and right wingers suddenly became "hot" yesterday in a fist fight at CIO headquarters here.

The melee occurred at a hearing called by CIO President Philip Murray into charges filed against the Greater New York (City) CIO Council.

Disagreements on procedure for the hearing continuing throughout the day finally broke into an exchange of blows at an afternoon meeting at which Ruth Young, vice president of the New York Council, was heard to shout:

"I won't stay in this room with you goons."

The council was charged by a group of New York right-wing union leaders with failing to support the CIO policy of indorsing President Truman. It also was accused of "disruptive and irresponsible action" interfering with negotiations of CIO unions in New York City.

L. S. Buckmaster, president of the CIO Rubber Workers Union and chairman of the committee conducting the hearing, last night confirmed at a news conference that blows had been struck and an attempt made to oust some people from the hearing.

Buckmaster was asked if he could recall any such violence occuring at a CIO meeting before.

"Nothing even approximating this," Buckmaster replied. "But this wasn't too bad."

Buckmaster said the trouble began when a group from the New York counsel began interrupting witnesses at the morning hearing.

"They were jumping up and making points of order so loudly, with everyone trying to talk at once, that we had to adjourn the meeting early at midday," he said.

After lunch the three-man hearing committee resumed the hearing on another floor of the CIO's building and invited only New York Council officials and those who had made the charges to attend.

The fighting began when Sam York Council, insisted on question-Burt, a vice president of the New ing Pat McGrath, member of the CIO Utility Workers, who was testifying.

Buckmaster said he ordered Burt to leave the room. He refused to go and Buckmaster said he "invited the ushers"—members of the CIO headquarters staff—to take Burt out.

Fists flew, with a group of CIO men waiting outside the room joining in.

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—A painting by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was sold for $2600 at a benefit auction last night.

The picture, which Eisenhower did for the Urban League, a group to aid Negroes, brought by far the highest price as paintings by 100 celebrities went under the hammer.

Eisenhower's painting is of an Indian, and on the reverse side is a landscape, the general's first attempt at painting for fun.

Secret Data Says Reds Ran 2 Rings in State Dept. in 1930s

By The Associated Press

The House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday released heretofore secret testimony claiming that two Communist underground rings were operating simultaneously in the State Department in the 1930s.

The testimony was given August 27, to Representatives Mundt (R., S. Dak.) and Nixon (R., Calif.), committee members, at a closed session here by Whittaker Chambers, self-styled former Communist and now an editor of Time magazine.

The congressmen said Chambers told them he had discussed with Alger Hiss, former State Department official, several persons who might be brought into the red "cell" to which he said Hiss belonged.

One person mentioned, Chambers said, was Noel Field, then in the department's western Europe division. Field was not further identified in the testimony.

Resigned April 30, 1936

(Department records show that a Noel Haviland Field was assigned to the department's western European division in the early 1930s. He was recorded as having been born in London of American parents in 1904, and as being a graduate of Harvard, and a Massachusetts social worker prior to entering the foreign service in 1926. Officials said he resigned from the Department April 30, 1936.)

"He (Hiss) made a number of attempts to draw Field in," Chambers said, "only to discover at the showdown that Field was connectd with another apparatus."

The testimony appeared in a 1300-page volume made public by the committee. It covered the private questioning of several witnesses here and in New York City.

Acted As Liaison Man

Chambers, one of the committee's main witnesses in its investigation of Soviet spying before and during the war, named Hiss as one of an "apparatus" of Government officials with whom the Communist Party worked during the 1930s. Chambers said he acted as a party liaison man with the Government group to which Hiss belonged.

Chambers named Hiss as a Communist, and said Hiss knew he (Chambers) was a Communist. Chambers said he was known to Hiss as only "Carl."

Hiss publicly denied Chambers' testimony, and at first declared he had never known Chambers. He lated said he knew Chambers briefly as a free-lance writer who called himself George Crosley.

After the hearings, Hiss challenged Chambers to repeat his accusations without the legal immunity enjoyed by a Government witness. Chambers repeated them on a radio broadcast, and Hiss sued him for libel.

Describes His Duties

Chambers described his party duties this way in the published testimony.

"The problem we had, the problem the Communist Party had with this group of intellectuals, which is exactly what they were, was keeping together and somehow keeping within the Communist atmosphere a group of people, who by their whole past environmental influence were not Communist.

"They were middle-classed people, and my problem there was to bring the face of the party, in Communist jargon, to them so they realized they were in touch with the Communist Party, that it was well aware of them. . . ."

Chambers said the purpose of the Communist underground was to infiltrate the Government everywhere possible.

Cleveland P. O. Clerks Deny Red Affiliation in Loyalty Quiz

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Eleven postoffice clerks here denied today that they are members of the Communist Party. They have been investigated by a loyalty board for possible perjury in connection with their loyalty oaths.

Although the board had withheld their names, the 11 identified themselves, saying that they feared being "railroaded" by a closed investigation.

The board had announced that 15 clerks here were being investigated, but Bertram A. Washington, president of the Cleveland branch of the National Alliance of Postal Employes, said 24 had been summoned to hearings.

Washington charged that 18 Negroes were being cited for disloyalty because they fought anti-Negro discrimination which, he claimed, has long been a practice in the Postoffice Department.

Theodore Milner charged he was being cited because he was a member of a committee of the Federation of Postoffice Clerks which brought official charges against former Postmaster Michael O'Donnell in 1944.

Another clerk being investigated, Max Rosenberg, claimed yesterday that the board's charges were the result of a religious and racial factional fight within the National Association of Postoffice Clerks.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Neutrals Still Seek Berlin Solution

Paris, Oct. 14 (AP).—The Security Council's so-called "neutral" nations tonight pushed last-minute efforts to uncover a solution to the Berlin crisis acceptable to the East and West.

Council President Juan A. Bramuglia told newsmen he still thinks there is a chance the six "neutrals" he speaks for will find a solution "just and acceptable" to Russia and the western powers.

Western delegates met for hours in secret session on the eve of renewed Council debate on Berlin. Authoritative sources said they still were waiting for the "neutrals" to come through with a plan. The Russians also were reported to be showing keen interest in off-the-floor maneuvering.

The Council meets tomorrow at 3 p. m. (9 a. m. EST).

Bramuglia, Argentine Foreign Minister, admitted the Berlin question was right back where it started in the Council with both sides maintaining "their known positions." But he insisted that with all the cards on the table, the "neutrals" — Argentina, Belgium, Canada, China, Syria and Colombia—now may come up with an answer.

Informed sources said the six nations were expected to ask a series of questions at the Council meeting in efforts to clear up some points in the Western case. The answers they get may cement a resolution.

The United States, Britain and France have charged Russia with threatening world peace by the Berlin blockade and want the Council to end it. Russia insists there is no blockade and the whole German problem should go before the four-power Council of Foreign Ministers.

Andrei Y. Vishinsky, fiery Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, is boycotting Council discussions, but he attends the meetings and is expected to veto any resolution which goes against the Soviet point of view.

While the corridor talks were under way, these developments took place on the floor:

1. The Security Council met on Palestine, and Britain and China demanded that Israel say what is being done to find the assassins of Count Folke Bernadotte. The Council adjourned without a vote or setting another session on the subject. Tomorrow the Assembly's 58-Nation Political Committee also tackles the Holy Land problem.

2. An Assembly subcommittee on arms slashing started debating how best to tackle a galaxy of suggestions topped by Russia's demand for a one-third cut in the arms of the Big Five. Col. W. R. Hodgson of Australia was named chairman.

3. Dr. Oscar Lange of Poland, a former University of Chicago professor, told the Assembly's Economis Committee that American dollars are rebuilding a new imperialist Germany.

Bevin Assails Soviet 'Imperialism,' Asks Ambitions

London, Oct. 14 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin today said the Soviets are "as imperialistic as the Czar ever was" and called on them to reveal the "extent of their ambitions."

Bevin addressed the National Union of Manufacturers.

"If we cannot get agreement," he said, "the issue that has got to be settled is—can we live together? What areas do they want to live in? What is the extent of their ambitions?

Bevin said Britain does not seek power to upset the Soviet system, but he added:

"We must resist any attempt on their part to destroy our liberty. If we cannot fix an agreement with our neighbors, at least let them keep over on their side of the garden wall and enjoy their own life in their own way."

Marshall Talks With Unden

Paris, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—United States Secretary of State George C. Marshall and Swedish Foreign Minister Osten Unden conferred for nearly an hour today on the international situation, with particular emphasis on Sweden's part in East-West relations.

Marshall was understood to have informed Unden that most Americans believe neutrality is no longer possible for nations whose governments are based on democratic principles and respect for human rights.

British Scientist Lays Crisis to U. S.

London, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—One of Britain's top scientists today charged the United States with responsibility for the current international tension with Russia.

Prof. P. M. S. Blackett of the University of Manchester asserted in a new book that this tension resulted from American use of the atomic bomb against Japan for political rather than military purposes.

An atomic scientist himself, Blackett said the dropping of the bomb on Japan two days before the planned start of the Soviet offensive against Japan apparently was intentional.

He said this kept Russia out of Japan and gave the United States a diplomatic victory in postwar power politics.

In his book, 'Military and Political Consequences of Atomic Energy," Blackett contends Russia is right in rejecting the "specious" American plan of atom control. He said the plan could curb Russia's atom power development and pin[illegible] Russian industry for Western targets.

A pioneer in the study of cosmic rays and atomic particles, Blackett is a World War I veteran who helped beat the submarine menace in the second war. He was awarded the Gold Medal of the Royal Society and the American Medal of Merit.

His book ridicules the idea the atomic bomb could win an overnight war with Russia. He estimates Germany doubled its production under ordinary bombs.

Hardison Decorated

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—The gvoernment today awarded the Bernardo O'Higgins Order of Merit to Rear Admiral Osborne B. Hardison, chief of U. S. Naval Missions in South America.

Polk Slaying Case in Greece Near Solution

By The Associated Press

The State Department said yesterday that information from Greek officials on the murder of Radio Correspondent George Polk last May indicates a major break in the case is near.

Polk's body was found in Salonika Bay after he had disappeared while reportedly bent upon interviewing the Greed rebel leader, Gen. Markos Vafiadis. He was correspondent for CBS.

An Athens radio broadcast recorded by American Government monitors yesterday said that Minister of Public Order Rentis had "let it be understood that the whole matter was now cleared up completely."

"An official statement will be made Saturday, when photographs of the culprits will be given for publication."

The radio report from Athens came after Rentis had conferred with Maj. Gen. William J. Donovan, who is legal counsel for a committee set up by the overseas writers, a Washington organization, to press for a complete investigation of the Polk slaying. The committee posted a $10,000 reward

Polk's body was found floating in Salonika Bay May 16.

Yoshida Voted Jap Premier

Tokyo, Oct. 14 (AP).—The ultra-conservative Shigeru Yoshida became premier of Japan tonight for the second time since the surrender, but by too narrow a margin for him to hold any clear or permanent majority.

A minority of the Diet's House of Representatives elected the 70-year-old Yoshida late tonight. He polled 185 votes to only one for any other candidate, the Democratic Socialist former Premier Tetsu Katayama.

However, 213 members cast blank ballots and 67 were absent. This amounted to a warning to Yoshida of hostility by the outgoing Democratic and Democratic Socialist parties.

The coalition cabinet of of Premier Hitoshi Ashida resigned last week in accepting "moral responsibility" for a government loan scandal.

A prewar ambassador to London and Rome, Yoshida was out of favor with the military throughout the war.

His immediate task will be to force through the Diet legislation enforcing General MacArthur's ban on strikes by government employes.

Yingkow Still Held by Reds

Nanking, Oct. 14 (AP).—A Chinese military spokesman today withdrew the government's three-day-old claim of capture of Yingkow, important south Manchurian seaport.

Monday's announcement had been hailed as a major victory.

The spokesman, Lieut. Gen. Teng Wen-yi, said the government had not yet taken Yingkow but could do so at any time, as only 1000 Communists were said to be there.

He asserted the government had "gradually gained the initiative,"

Key Men Plan Pearl Harbor Prevention

Toyko, Oct. 14 (AP).—American commanders in the Pacific and Alaska discussed measures to prevent another Pearl Harbor in a series of top secret conferences with General Douglas MacArthur ending today.

The problem of Pacific defenses brought together key officers of the Army, Navy and Air Force guarding the northwestern and Far Eastern frontiers of the United States.

Air Force Lieut. Gen. Nathan F. Twining, commanding the Alaska Defenses, and Vice Admiral John L. McCrea, deputy commander of the U. S. Pacific Fleet, met with General MacArthur for three days

Informed sources confined information on the talks to two points:

1. The American commanders discussed with General MacArthur practical precautions against the possibility of another surprise attack.

2. The high-ranking officers attained a "fine spirit of cooperation and coordination" among the Army, Navy and Air Force. This was described as an outstanding achievement.

The Tokyo talks got down to the practical application of working together in the field in the event of war.

U. P., Chinese Agencies Get Break in Korea

Seoul, Korea, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—The South Korean Ministry of Information gave the United Press and the Chinese Central News Agency a permit today to use the office and equipment of the former Korea Press News Agency for one month.

The government announced yesterday the license of Korea Press, which formerly served all newspapers in South Korea, the American occupation zone, had been cancelled.

The ministry of information said the cancellation was based upon an old Japanese law which provided that the proprietor of a news agency must live in the city where the agency has headquarters.

S. S. Kim, proprietor of Korea Press, live in Hongkong.

The agency first was closed October 4, when Korean police arrested a number of officials and editors and charged them with subversive activity in behalf of the Communist regime in Russian-occupied North Korea.

Dr. Wang Estimates 2 Years to Avoid War

Frankfurt, Germany, Oct. 14 (AP).—Dr. Wang Shin-chieh, Chinese Foreign Minister, said tonight the world still has "one or two more years" to avoid war.

"I am not a pessimist," he declared.

"I believe there is no likelihood of an immediate war."

He said he is confident "eventually China will be able to get rid of the Communist menace."

Dr. Wang inspected the Berlin airlift and expects to confer with United States Gen. Lucius Clay.

ECA Experts Gain British Zone Entry

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul Hoffman flew back to Washington from Europe yesterday, having won only a partial success in his efforts to slow down the dismantling of German factories as reparations.

Hoffman

He had hoped to puersuade the French and British governments to put a temporary stop order on all removals of German plant equipment to countries that were victims of the war. In this quest he met complete failure.

Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France and Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Great Britain reminded him that German plants were being dismantled under an agreement signed by 18 allied countries, including the United States, and that many of these countries were depending on German equipment for their own economic recovery.

However, Bevin gave some assurances, which Hoffman can show to Congressmen who have been distributed about the dismantling program. The E[illegible] has been under insistent congressional pressure to keep in Germany any industrial equipment that might be useful for German recovery.

Bevin agreed that Hoffman's committee of industrialists, headed by George M. Humphrey of Cleveland, could send its investigators into the British zone of Germany and could count on all possible cooperation from the British authorities there.

It was agreed that the Humphrey committee should give priority, first, to the 100-odd plants now being dismantled in the British zone; and, second, to plants that were unimportant to German recovery but might be offered to the interallied reparations agency.

What Bevin wanted above all was speed from ECA in deciding which plants, if any, should be kept in Germany. The clear implication was that i Hoffman submitted such a list it would get prompt consideration from Britain and other claimant nations.

Technical experts of the Humphrey committee arrived in the American zone of Germany last Tuesday to consult the authorities there on the subject of dismantling. Now the door is open for these experts, or others, to go into the British zone as well.

Bevin is understood to have stressed the need of getting the whole reparations question settled quickly, as far as the western zones are concerned. American and British officials in Germany have often complained that the lack of final decisions about dismantling was hampering German economic recovery.

American and British officials in Germany want the suspense ended quickly; they want to know, one way or the other, just which plants will be kept in Germany and which will be shut down so that their equipment can go elsewhere.

Hoffman declined to talk yesterday about his Monday-to-Thursday round trip to Europe, but is expected to discuss the dismantling program at a press conference this morning.

Dulles Due in Frankfurt

3 Bikini Test Ships Must Be Sunk

A dozen of the 76 ships used in the 1946 Bikini atomic tests are still afloat, three still dangerously hot with radioactivity.

Two of them—the heavy cruiser Pensacola and the destroyer Hughes—will be sunk in forthcoming naval maneuvers because it would cost more to decontaminate them than could be realized from their sale as scrap metal, the Navy said yesterday.

The third of the heavily poisoned trio—the shattered hulk of the carrier Independence, is anchored in San Francisco Bay as a training ground for safety teams and for decontamination experiments.

Nine of the 12 remaining ships are cleansed of radioactivity. Four—two submarines and two landing craft—are being returned to service. The other five, all transports, will be sold as surplus, the Navy said.

Of the 64 Bikini test ships that have been destroyed, nine sank or capsized when the underwater bomb exploded. Those that capsized were sunk later.

The remainder, except for the 12 still afloat, have been used as targets or scuttled.

In the two years since the Bikini tests, the Navy has explored a number of decontamination methods, about which little has been made public. It is significant, however, that ships which were located anywhere near the eye of the target finally were scuttled. Apparently they could not be cleansed.

Air Force to Use B-50 Bombers in Arctic War Games

The United States will use B-50 bombers, one of its newest type bombardment planes, in training operations in Alaska this winter.

An Air Force announcement yesterday said that three five-plane units of the B-50s would rotate on training missions in the North with B-29s. The exercises will extend from November 1 to March 15.

This will be the first time the B-50s have been in the far Northern defense area.

The training operation will be carried out by the forty-third bomb wing, a unit of the Strategic Air Command, based at Andrews Air Base, Md.

Scientists to Align Resources in War

The Government created a committee yesterday to study the problem of organizing scientific resources in event of a national emergency.

The committee is under the Research and Development Board

Dr. Vannevar Bush, soon to retire as chairman of the board, announced the formation of the new committee.

The new committee is headed by Dr. Irvin Stewart, president of West Virginia University and a former Federal Communications commissioner. He is author of "Organizing Scientific Research for War," based on his wartime experiences with the Office of Scientific Research and Development.

Dr. Bush has asked the committee to recommend ways in which the present research and development board would function best under wartime conditions.

Other members of the committee:

Dr. James P. Baxter 3d, president of Williams College, author of "Scientists Against Time," and the winner of the 1946 Pulitzer history prize. During the war he served as historian of the OSRD.

John T. Connor, now secretary and counsel for Merck & Co., Inc., Rahway, N. J., and formerly special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy.

Dr. Willard Machle of New York University. During the war he directed the armored medical research laboratory at Fort Knox, Ky.

Coed Kidnaped And Shot 3 Times

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

CLAUDINE SWANSON, 20-year-old junior at San Jose State College, was kidnaped by a man cruising the streets of San Jose, Calif., at dawn, shot three times and dumped into the street. Miss Swanson, who was waiting for a bus, said she got into the man's car willingly because she mistook him for a fellow student. The same man had picked up a young woman cannery worker less than an hour earlier and savagely pistol-whipped her before she escaped. Both girls described the kidnaper as "baby-faced and about 30"

Mrs. Roosevelt Answers Red Lynch Attack

Paris, Oct. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today "lynching in the United States is deplorable, but it is against the law" and exceptional.

She replied to a Soviet attack in the United Nations Social Committee against "the practice of lynching" in the southern United States.

Alexei Pavlov, a bearded Russian professor, had urged the committee to adopt a Soviet amendment to a draft declaration of human rights. The amendment would make governments responsible for "the protection of each individual against criminal attempts on his person." Pavlov said this is necessary to protect American Negroes from mob terror.

Mrs. Roosevelt turned to the Russian and said:

"Last year some very interesting cases took place against this evil (lynching) in the United States which he (Pavlov) either overlooked or didn't hear about.

"I know he reads the United States papers, or has someone read them for him. But sometimes I, too, have something from Soviet papers.

"I was pleased to note that in one such paper recently I was called a schoolmistress.

"This is a very high calling and I am very flattered. However, I suggest, in this committee, he has given us a fair example that he is a schoolmaster and we are the scholars."

Pavlov quoted the late Senator Hattie Caraway (D., Ark.) as saying during the depression of the early 1930s that some 1000 Americans were dying yearly from hunger and malnutrition.

"This gentleman's statement," said Pavlow, showed the need for world-wide measures to lessen the danger of death by hunger.

Replied Mrs. Roosevelt: "On one little detail, the Soviet delegate was not quite prepared. Senator Caraway was not a 'gentleman.' 'He' was a lady."

overt acts, charged that Monti gave himself and his plane up to the Germans in Italy between October 13, 1944, and May 8, 1945, after going AWOL in Karachi, India.

The indictment alleged that Monti volunteered his services to the Germans, was released as a prisoner of war and broadcast for the Nazis from Berlin as Martin Weithaupt. Subsequently, the indictment charges, Monti became an officer in the SS Elite Guard.

After the Nazi capitulation, the indictment said, Monti made his way to Italy and joined the Fifth Army.

Military authorities returned him to the United States and he was court-martialed for the theft of the plane and desertion. A 15-year prison sentence was remitted and he was allowed to reenlist as a private. When he was arrested last January he had advanced to sergeant.

When Monti was arrested his father Martin A. Monti, jr., said that his son told him during a visit to St. Louis that the Nazis threatened him while a prisoner and "I let them think I had become a Nazi. After all, they had the guns."

Conviction on the charges carries penalties ranging from five years imprisonment and $10,000 fine to death.

AMG Told Russians Might Resort to Force

Berlin, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—A report submitted to the American military government said that the Russians had lost the battle of Berlin in the political sense but that they might resort "to any means" to get control of the city, it was disclosed today.

100,000 Ex-POWs Serve Soviet Zone as Police

Bonn, Germany, Oct. 14 (AP).—A Moscow-trained force of 100,000 former German war prisoners is carrying out special police duties in the Russian zone, the escaped deputy Mayor of Leipzig said today.

throughout western Europe—in Italy, France, Finland and Germany . . There is a growing consciousness of the value of rights and freedoms of the individual.

"As that increases, as the ability of western Europe to develop itself increases, as its ability to send goods to eastern countries increases with the consequent pressure on the satellite countries to return to the way of political freedom . . . as that comes about, Soviet expansion will not only be halted, it will recede.

"Various pressures that are inherent in the wishes of the people of Europe will become so great they cannot be resisted.

"This means that we must be firm . . . By continuing this airlift indefinitely and maintaining our position in Berlin we will have assured the people who do want freedom they will not be abandoned."

The British and American military governments today ordered German authorities to tighten the counter-blockade of Soviet-occupied Germany.

Resolution Called Key To Holy Land Truce

Paris, Oct. 14 (NYHT).—Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting United Nations Palestine mediator, told the Security Council today the Holy Land truce may soon slide back into war unless the U. N. can increase Jewish and Arab respect for U. N. truce supervision in the field.

At the same meeting, Israel declared the U. N. should put pressure on the Arabs to agree to a direct peace conference with the Jews.

Syria, France and Britain asked rather sharply why Israel has not produced better results in searching for the assassins of Count Folke Bernadotte.

Britain and China introduced jointly a resolution which sought to improve U. N. truce supervision in the Holy Land, and demanded that "at an early date" Israel report formally on its progress in hunting the Bernadotte killers.

Convinced of Negligence

Dr. Bunche asserted his personal view that one factor in the Bernadotte murder was negligence on the part of the Israeli military authorities. He said a Jewish liaison officer picked the route on which the slaying occurred.

Aubrey S. Eban, Israeli representative, said more than 200 Sternists had been arrested and that the gang was shattered.

[Faris El Khouri of Syria said U. N. truce personnel were "received pleasantly" in Arab countries. El Khouri declared that "what the Nazis did to the Jews, they (the Jews) are now doing to the Arabs, and worse—the Arabs are being massacred and expelled from their homes."]

It was not clear when the council would meet again to consider the British-Chinese resolution.

The U. N. political committee, on which 58 nations are represented, will take up the Bernadotte report on Israel at morning and afternoon meetings Friday.

Bellevue Candy Brings Boys Back

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ROOFTOP CONFAB—Atop the roof of New York's Bellevue Hospital, three boys (arrows) from the psychiatric ward listen to Mrs. Wanda Wright's pleas that they return. The youths climbed over a wire fence around the roof and dropped to the eighth-story ledge to throw water on pedestrians on First ave. As police and firemen spread rescue nets below the boys, Mrs. Wright, a teacher assigned to the psychiatric division, used lollypops to coax them back. One youth surveys those below him from his seat on the ledge

Hitler and Eva To Be Tried 'In Absentia'

Munich, Germany, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Although presumed dead, Adolf Hitler and Eva Braun will be tried "in absentia" Friday as "major offenders" under the Nazi regime.

Under Germany's denazification laws, conviction would carry 10-year imprisonment sentences.

The Bavarian government will ask that their property be confiscated. Eva's property was joined with Hitler's by their marriage in a Berlin bunker just before Germany collapsed.

Hitler's assets are believed to total less than $60,000.

Hitler's former luxurious estate at Obersalzberg now is a pile of rubble valued at about $2,700. His house in Munich is worth about $45,000. Eva had a house in Munich too, but it has not been evaluated. Her home was turned over to the occupation forces and an American family now lives there.

Narcotics Chief Opposes Sleeping Tablet Curbs

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Federal control over sales of sleeping tablets "would be about as popular as prohibition," United States Narcotics Commissioner H. J. Anslinger said today in announcing opposition to such legislation.

"We are opposed to any bill to place barbituates in the same Federal control compartment as morphine," he said. "There is virtually no interstate illicit traffic in the drug. The States have not shown they can or cannot control it. Let us have a fair trial for local control."

All Prominent

Peru Orders Several Out Of Country

Lima, Peru, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Several prominent persons were ordered deported today because of their "international disruptive activities." It was the latest government move in connection with the abortive sailor revolt at Calleo October 3.

Among those ordered deported are Eudocio Ravines, editorial executive of the right-wing newspaper La Prensa and editor of the semi-weekly Vanguardia; Alexander Koseleff, conductor of the Arequipa Symphony Orchestra, and his wife, Elizabeth Fuchs.

Government spokesmen refused to elaborate on the activities which caused the group to be deported.

Restrictions under the state of siege proclaimed after the October 3 revolt were relaxed to permit public gatherings until midnight and the movement of persons and vehicles between 6 a. m. and 1 a. m.

Truman Sees Atom Pulled Into Politics

he said his own belief was that "we must not put profit-making about the national welfare" and he would fight any effort to do so.

Mr. Truman had worked over the Minnesota and Wisconsin whistle stops, slugging hardest at the Republican farm record. He accused grain speculators of robbing the farmers and said the Eightieth Congress helped them do it.

There was method in his return swing through Minnesota. He has a reasonably good prospect of picking up that State's 11 electoral votes. And the farmers in the area are more worried over what bumper yields are doing to their prices than at any time in recent years.

His Wisconsin outlook appears virtually nil, but State leaders urged him to come. They say he can at least help make a dent in the now solid Wisconsin Republican congressional delegation.

Mr. Truman's box office appeal continued to pick up; increasingly large crowds turned out to see him and hear him at the crossroads. Before crossing into Wisconsin, he stopped at Mankota, Waseca, Rochester and Winona. Then, before entering Milwaukee, he left the train at the State capital, Madison, for an outdoor rally, and gave a rear-platform talk at Waukesha.

More than 25,000 persons lined the streets at Madison and another 6000 squeezed into the University of Wisconsin's stock pavilion to hear him plead for a return to the "liberalism" of old Bob La Follette. Students in the crowd gave Truman the college yell and added a "Sis Boom Bah" for daughter Margaret.

He chose Milwaukee tonight to tell the inside story of the atom bomb's development, and his own decision to use it to end World War II. But he veered from the usual academic discussion of Atomic Era possibilities to a political attack as bitter as last night's St. Paul charge that Dewey was a "recent convert" from isolationism.

Governor Dewey at Phoenix on September 23 argued that development of the peacetime uses of atomic energy must not be left entirely to Government monopoly once the danger that it will be developed by an aggressor as an instrument of conquest is past.

The President said Dewey's implication was that "the peacetime uses of atomic energy should be taken away from the Government and turned over to private corporations."

Noting that the GOP platform was silent on the subject of atomic energy, he said he first assumed this was an oversight but since the Dewey speech has concluded that the omission was "deliberate."

Mr. Truman said it pointed up "the basic conflict between the Democratic and Republican Parties—between the people and the selfish interests."

He told the crowd a force like atomic fission, possessing in one pound of uranium as much energy as the burning of three million pounds of coal, cannot be handled on a "business as usual" basis.

"I believe that atomic energy should not be used to fatten the profits of big business," he said. "I believe it should be used to benefit all the people. The largest corporation in the world is far too small to be entrusted with such power, least of all for its own profit."

Then, in another dig at Dewey, he added:

"Most responsible businessmen know this. Men who know what atomic energy means do not talk about the 'dead hand of Government.'"

And then he hurled this one:

"Atomic energy cannot and must not be another Teapot Dome for private exploitation—any more than it can be allowed to enter into competitive armaments."

He implied that Dewey overlooked "the most important point of all"—that "you cannot separate the peacetime use of atomic materials from their potential military use."

Atomic material in a power station, he argued, is not far from being an atomic arsenal, and added:

"This is the blunt fact that requires an international control that will really work. The same fact makes it absolutely necessary to insist upon public ownership and control in the United States."

Stressing that our whole atomic energy program, military as well as peaceful, is based on "constant and effective teamwork between Government and private enterprise," he said over more than a thousand private contractors and suppliers are now participating.

He said everything possible is being done for even greater private participation "but we must not put profit-making above the national welfare.

"Some day it may be possible to fit atomic energy more closely into the normal pattern of American business," he added. "But I cannot tell you that this is just around the corner. I will make no light promises of that sort."

He said it took Franklin Roosevelt's "foresight" to order the first research into military uses in 1940 and his "courage" in 1942 to launch the bomb project full scale.

Then he told of his first word that the experiment was successful, how Secretary Stimson came to Potsdam to tell him in July 1945 and of how he made "the hardest decision I have ever had to make."

He said he decided to end the war quickly to save countless lives, "but I resolved then and there to do everything I could to see that this awesome discovery was turned into a force for peace and the advancement of mankind."

He termed the United States offer to dispose of our existing bombs, and to turn over to an international agency full information "one of the world's greatest examples of political responsibility and moral leadership."

He said our position is unchanged, even though it involves some sacrifice of national sovereignty by ourselves and all nations. He said that price must be paid for the mutual security of nations against the horrors of war. But he again served notice on Russia that America will never make a "one-sided sacrifice."

Earlier today, Mr. Truman announced his campaign plans through election eve. Monday he will fly to Miami, to address the American Legion, making two speeches in Raleigh, N. C., en route home. On Saturday, October 23 he will fly to Pittsburgh, Pa., for a speech, probably returning the same day.

Immediately afterward he will begin a wind-up campaign swing by train, speaking in Chicago October 25, in Cleveland October 26, in Boston October 27, in New York City's Madison Square Garden October 28, and in Brooklyn's Academy of Music October 29.

Then he will scoot for St. Louis, Mo., for a wind-up speech, October 30 and participate in Shrine ceremonies in Kansas City November 1. From Independence, Mo., that night he will be linked with Senator Alben W. Barkley at Barkley's home in Paducah, Ky., in a joint election eve "Fireside Chat" broadcast over four national networks from 9:30 to 9:45 p. m.

Congress Defended On Farm Record

At Milwaukee

Wallace Puts Major Parties On Labor Grid

Milwaukee, Oct. 14 (AP).—Henry Wallace said tonight the pattern of Democratic and Republican actions at home and abroad is always "brutally antilabor" and "calculated only to enrich a few murder merchants."

He continued his bitter attacks on the Truman Administration in a speech prepared for delivery at the Milwaukee auditorium, while President Truman himself was speaking at a ball park in the same city.

Defends Ousted Leaders

Wallace, running for Mr. Truman's job on the Progressive Party ticket, warmly defended the former leadership of Local 248 of the CIO Union Auto Workers. He did not mention those leaders by name. One of them, Harold Christoffel, has been convicted of perjury because he told the House Labor Committee he wasn't a Communist.

Wallace, in connection with Local 248, slapped hard at Mr. Truman, at the new anti-Communist leadership of the local, at the Allis-Chalmers Corp. where the local was on strike for nearly a year and at Representative Kersten (R., Wis.), a leading investigator of charges that the local was Communist-dominated.

He said Mr. Truman "never lifted a finger to prevent destruction of union standards" at Allis-Chalmers, and "did what he could to help destroy the union."

Concerning the present leaders of Local 248, who are supporters of Walter Reuther, national president of the auto workers, Wallace said they have brought a "new NAM look" to Allis-Chalmers labor relations, and it is "only natural" they are supporting Truman for reelection.

Selections Natural

Concerning the ousted leadership, Wallace attacked Allis-Chalmers and said "it was natural that the workers of Allis-Chalmers would pick tough, strong men to lead them in fighting for decent living conditions against such an enemy."

The candidate said these leaders improved conditions, but in return got "prosecution," "inquisitions," 'smears and slanders."

Wallace, resuming his assaults on America's bipartisan foreign policy, said there is a "deal being hatched in Washington and Wall Street, in Berlin and Rome and Madrid, against the peace and security of our world."

St Paul, Minn., Oct. 14 (AP).—Representative Clifford R. Hope (R., Kans.) said in an address here today that some Democratic leaders are making "inaccurate and misleading" charges against the farm record of the Eightieth Congress.

Hope is chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture.

He spoke at the convention of the National Federation of Women's Republican clubs.

The Kansan, long a leader in the farm bloc, said the record of the last Congress on farm legislation was good and "I want to make it perfectly clear however . . . that in the main it is the result of the work of both Republican and Democrats and both parties are entitled to credit."

Election of Thomas E. Dewey as President and a Republican Congress, Hope said, will assure the farmers of America getting a "rightful place in the economy of the Nation."

Delegates from 35 States were registered for the convention. Mrs. Addison B. Green of Holyoke, Mass., is national president.

Scripps-Howard Papers Announce for Dewey

The Scripps-Howard newspapers yesterday announced their support of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in next month's presidential election.

The nation-wide group of 19 newspapers, which also backed Dewey in the 1944 campaign, said in an editorial:

"The crucial issue of this campaign is whether competence, wisdom, understanding of basic issues and teamwork under firm and skillful leadership shall guide our truly United States in the conduct of foreign and domestic affairs during the next four critical years.

"We believe the better hope is offered by Governor Dewey and Governor Warren."

"President Truman," the editorial said, "is a good man, a good American. . . . It was his misfortune, not his fault, that experience and training had not prepared him for the crushing responsibilities that fell upon him."

Sen. Hoey Predicts Truman Will Carry N. C.

Shelby, N. C., Oct. 14 (AP).—Senator Clyde Hoey (D., N. C.) predicted today that "President Truman will get North Carolina's electoral vote, it can now be said with definite assurance." Hoey has just completed a campaign swing which carried him over most of the State.

President Truman will visit North Carolina next Tuesday and will speak at Raleigh at the dedication of a monument to Presidents Jackson, Johnson and Polk.

Republicans claim their national ticket will carry North Carolina for the first time since 1928.

Tax on Baby Powder Hits Lawmaker Twice

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Representative Robert Nodar, jr., told a Republican audience last night that if he is returned to Congress he will work for repeal of the Federal tax on baby powder.

His wife gave birth to twins last summer.

Thomas to Be Honored

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP).—Norman Thomas, the Socialist party's perennial candidate for President, will be guest of honor Saturday night at a reception sponsored by the local branch of the party. He has been certified as a candidate on the Maryland ballot.

Jap Encephalitis Toll

Tokyo, Oct. 14 (AP).—The Welfare Ministry said today 1088 Japanese died of sleeping sickness during the epidemic last summer.

Counties to Vote On Extra Ballot For 3 Unopposed

By The Associated Press

Voters in rural areas of Loudoun, Fairfax and Prince William counties will have an extra ballot to cast November 2, but Fairfax County Agent Joseph Beard figures not one person in 50 knows what it's about.

The extra ticket will be marked for election of three northern Virginia soil conservation district supervisors.

Names on the ballot will be Edward C. Norman, Purcellville; Stuart T. de Bell, Centerville, and Lester W. Huff, Nokesville, all seeking reelection. They all are unopposed and run without regard to political affiliation.

Attacks Rivals

Thurmond Presses for Ky. Ballots

Covington, Ky., Oct. 14 (U.P.).—States' Rights Presidential Candidate J. Strom Thurmond, Governor of South Carolina, pressed his bid for Kentucky's 11 electoral votes with a sarcastic attack on his three leading opponents tonight.

"We are told that Henry Wallace is a shining saviour of mankind. We are made to believe that Harry Truman is a 'regular guy' or a 'good fellow' as he himself once said of Joe Stalin. And they try to sell us on the idea that Tom Dewey is a brilliant glamour-boy executive type, whatever that is," he said.

"But we have yet to be shown that either of these three has any conception of the genuine fundamentals of American representative Government."

The States' Rights nominee said his party offered the only method by which "you may voice your opposition to an un-American and unconstitutional program designed as a method of purchasing . . . minority votes."

He again concentrated on an attack against the proposed Fair Employment Practices Commission, saying it would pave the way for eventual Communist domination of the United States.

Thurmond expressed the hope he would get enough electoral votes to throw the presidential election into the House of Representatives, "so the smaller States of this Nation can exercise their constitutional privilege of electing a President of their choice."

"We shall restore the great southland to a position of just and equal influence in the political life of the Nation," he said

Lip-and-Tuck Campaign Foray Proves Treat to Richmond

Richmond, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Governor Tuck, commenting on a statement by Republican Secretary Earle Lutz that the Governor couldn't be elected dog catcher today in his home town of South Boston, said:

"I am not a candidate for that office in South Boston or Richmond. I suggest that Mr. Lutz run for that office, for which he is so well qualified. Perhaps he might be elected. He has never been elected to any other office."

Lutz had said:

"They sit down there (in Richmond), and figure out where they need the votes most. Then the word comes down to the lesser officials.

"Bill Tuck couldn't run for dog catcher in his own home town and win there today," he claimed in reporting evidence of growing Republican support.

Roanoke Democrats Want Barkley to Speak

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—The possibility of a speech here by Senator Alben W. Barkley, the Democratic vice presidential candidate, appeared today in the wake of a meeting of some 60 regular Democrats last night.

Meeting on the call of Robert W. Menefee, defeated congressional primary candidate, the Democrats named a committee to approach Barkley for a speech here.

Kansas City Hears Dewey on Good Rule

Truman Administration as "tired" and "confused."

"It scolds and complains," he said. "It runs off in a dozen different directions at once. It tries to frighten people. It divides them. It is coming apart at the seams. . . ."

Then he gave his own formula:

"Appoint the right kind of people in the first place. Give them full authority to do their job; make them fully responsible; and hold them strictly accountable for the results. That is the way to get a job done. . . .

"I propose that we restore the pride of service to those who serve the public. For nearly 18 years I have worked with Federal and State civil service employes and I have the highest regard for them.

"I know the wonderful job that they can do. I know what they have been up against. With good leadership they can really do a good job.

"I propose that we get that kind of leadership in the departments of our Government. We shall make Government a noble, challenging, patriotic business—a career worthy of the ablest Americans. We will bring to Washington an administration which will find the ablest Americans to direct the business of America's Government in the best American tradition."

Boys Sorry They Hurled Tomatoes at Dewey

Mount Vernon, Ill., Oct. 14 (U.P.).—The mystery of who threw the tomatoes at Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in his rear platform appearance at Mount Vernon, Ill., last Tuesday night was solved today.

Mount Vernon Police Chief Verner L. Pigg and Illinois State Police Capt. R. C. Winder said they obtained statements from four boys admitting they threw green and ripe tomatoes at the Republican presidential nominee.

The officers said the boys, ranging from 14 to 17 in age, admitted that the tomato throwing was "just a prank" and said "they were sorry."

Bursitis Makes Dewey Waive Hand-Shaking

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, GOP presidential nominee, paraded through downtown Kansas Citythis afternoon with his right hand in his trousers pocket.

Physicians said the candidate was suffering from a recurrence of bursitis in his right shoulder, and warned him against shaking hands.

Dewey Asks L. & N. Not To Discipline Engineer

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 14 (AP).—Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co. officials who declined to be quoted by name reported today Gov. Thomas E. Dewey had requested that no disciplinary action be taken against Engineer Lee Tindle.

Tindle was engineer of Dewey's special train when it backed toward a crowd the Republican presidential nominee was addressing Tuesday at Beaucoup, Ill. Tindle, an Evansville, Ind., resident, said there had been mist and smoke and he ran about 8 or 10 feet past a water tower. He said he then began to back up slowly, giving the proper signals.

An L. & N. spokesman said "an investigation is under way, but a great deal of weight will be given the Governor's request. We are sorry about the incident."

Sen. Barkley Accepts Richmond Invitation

Richmond, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Senator Alben W. Barkley, Democratic vice presidential candidate, has tentatively accepted an invitation to strike a blow for the national party ticket here on October 26 or 28, city Democratic committee headquarters announced today.

L. E. Marlowe, campaign director for the headquarters, said that Senator Hatch (D., N. Mex.) of the national Democratic speakers bureau had advised him that he felt the speaking engagement could be arranged for one of the two dates.

Hecht Film Boycotted

London, Oct. 14 (AP).—British film exhibitors have decided to boycott the work of Ben Hecht, American writer-producer, because of what they term his anti-British attitude on the Palestine question.

Warren Calls for Election of GOP Congress

En Route With Warren to Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 14 (AP).—Vice Presidential Nominee Earl Warren threw the weight of the national GOP ticket today behind the party drive to return the Washington State government to Republicans.

Washington's major contest this year centers on the close Governorship battle between Gov. Mon C. Wallgren, good friend of President Truman, and Arthur B. Langlie, the Republican Governor whom Wallgren beat four years ago.

On the cross-State trip today—at Wenatchee, Skykomish and Everett—the Republican vice presidential candidate from California coupled his campaign appeal for election of a Republican Congress with praise for Langlie.

Great Source of Strength

Traveling through the heart of the Pacific Northwest public power belt, Warren termed its hydroelectric power sources "one of the greatest strengths that this Nation has today."

Without the Columbia River's hydroelectric power, he said, "we probably would not have had the atom bomb ahead of Hitler."

The Republican Party, he added, is pledged to develop the West's water power resources to the utmost.

Sharing the Californian's attention today were four of his children, who were on the train for the Warren's twenty-third wedding anniversary.

As a surprise to Mrs. Warren, Nina, 15; Dorothy, 17; Bobby, 13—joined the train last night, shortly before it pulled out of Spokane.

Another daughter, Virginia, 20, has been aboard since the start.

Taft Visions Florida In Republican Column

Hollywood, Fla., Oct. 14 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said here today Florida will be one of the first States to go Republican "because we don't have to convert people down here."

Taft, at a press conference here, noted especially the increasing number of Republicans in the State.

He said Republicans have a chance to carry Florida, Tennessee, North Carolina and Virginia if they poll 45 per cent of the vote.

Conrad Hits Truman Health Plan Stand

Absent Voter Information

The three principal sources in Washington of information about absentee voting regulations are as follows:

1. Absentee voters' bureau, League of Women Voters, in lobby of Star Building, 11th and Pennsylvania ave. nw., open from 11:30 a. m. to 8 p. m., Monday through Friday. Telephone Executive 0488.

2. Democratic Central Committee absentee voters' bureau, 1336 New York ave. nw., open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. daily except Sunday. Telephone District 1717.

3. Republican State Committee absentee voters' bureau, 1430 K st. nw., open 8:30 a. m. to 9 p. m. daily except Sunday. Telephone Executive 4365.

President Truman was charged yesterday by an outspoken foe of compulsory medical insurance with "playing politics" with the Nation's health.

Arthur L. Conrad of Chicago, associate administrator of the National Physicians Committee, said further that the National Health Assembly held here last May was "a politically-rigged conference" to support the later report made to the President by Oscar Ewing, Federal Security Administrator.

Conrad spoke at a meeting of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland, at University of Maryland, in College Park.

He charged also that the Communist Party was a moving force for socialized medicine, pointing out that Lenin has been quoted as saying "Socialized medicine is the keystone to the arch of the Socialist state."

Speaking of President Truman's approval of Ewing's 10-year health program which incorporates national compulsory health insurance, Conrad declared:

"President Truman and Oscar Ewing are playing politics with the people's health. The basic statistics used in the report have been deliberately manipulated to 'prove' that the national health is unsound."

He urged continuation of voluntary health plans, "the system which has proved to be the best in the entire world."

Massenburg Plea Censored

Richmond, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Straight Democratic ticket forces today called the presidential neutrality stand taken by State Central Committee Chairman G. Alvin Massenburg "a new low in political cowardice and a distinct disservice to Virginia and the Democratic Party."

The sharply worded attack, released over the signatures of Chairman Robert Whitehead, delegate from Nelson County, and Marvin A. Hutchinson, director of the Truman-Barkley straight ticket campaign, added:

"We call upon the red-blooded Democrats of Virginia to rise up and repudiate this sort of leadership, by going to the polls and voting the straight Democratic ticket."

It was Massenburg's statement of regular party headquarters policy yesterday that stirred the wrath of the straight ticketers. The chairman, speaker of the House of Delegates and also regular party headquarters director, said the differences of opinion between the Thurmond and Truman backers were "honest differences." He urged all ever, there were others who re- Democrats, whatever their views of the presidential picture, to unite behind Senator Robertson and the nine Democratic congressional candidates.

"The statement of Chairman Massenburg of the Democratic State Central Committee is without parallel in the long history of the party in Virginia," the Whitehead-Hutchinson statement said. "The announced policy of Mr. Massenburg is in effect negative in purpose, and it was so intended."

From the organization side, howgarded the statement by Massenburg as even in tone and the proper thing to be said to prevent any further rift in the Democratic ranks in view of the congressional contests. Senator Robertson and seven of the nine congressional nominees with Republican opposition have declared their support of President Truman.

Massenburfi, himself, commented that he felt he was carrrying out the directive of the recent central committee resolution which called upon him to set up headquarters and get out the Democratic vote without mentioning the presidential race.

Maryland Preparing New Wage-Hour Bill

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP).—State Labor Commissioner Joseph F. Didomenico said today he is preparing a wage and hour bill covering both men and women to replace two measures he recently withdrew from the legislative council.

Stassen Blames Reds, Truman for Berlin

Norman, Okla., Oct. 14 (AP).—The "ornery, obnoxious foreign policy of Russia" was blamed today by Harold E. Stassen as the principal cause of the present Berlin crisis.

The former Minnesota Governor, speaking at the University of Oklahoma, also criticized President Truman and his Administration for what was called a lack of successful settlement of World War II.

"The first cause, of course, is the onery, obnoxious foreign policy of the Communists of Soviet Russia," Stassen declared.

"The second cause is the failure of the present Administration to carry out a firm United States policy."

Stasen, now president of the University of Pennsylvania, said there is a "rising tide of public opinion for a new occupant of the White House."

Barkley Disputes Dewey Claim on Farm Bill

Clinton, Okla., Oct. 14 (AP).—Thomas E. Dewey's interpretation of the farm record of the GOP-controlled Eightieth Congress was challenged today by Senator Alben W. Barkley, Democratic vice presidential nominee.

Referring to Dewey's speech yesterday at Oklahoma City in which the New Yorker attributed to the Republican Congress passage of a long-range farm bill, Barkley said:

"Governor Dewey wasn't quite well advised when he said the Republican Congress passed the only permanent farm program."

"In that respect," Barkley told a rally in front of the Clinton House, "he did not take the people of Oklahoma into his confidence, for I assume he knew what the Congress did."

Actually, Barkley said, the Eightieth Congress "crippled the farm support program" and passed only "a makeshift, hodge-podge bill."

Barkley said Congress kept the support price structure at 90 per cent of parity until next June "because this is an election year," but ordered the support price dropped to as low as 60 per cent of parity thereafter.

By refusing to allow the Commodity Credit Corporation to acquire adequate storage facilities, Barkley said, Congress in effect "crippled" the farm program.

Since grain storage facilities are not available, he claimed, many farmers are unable to hold their wheat back and have been forced to sell it at prices below support levels.

Wallace Rally Told Truman Is Not for Social Equality

A rally of the Progressive Party of North Virginia was held last night at Odd Fellows Hall, 411 S. Columbus st., Arlington, with approximately 35 persons attending.

Dr. Joseph Johnson of the medical department of Howard University told the Negro and white audience that a speech made by President Truman a few years ago showed that he was "not for social equality of the Negro people."

He quoted Truman as saying, at a Negro Democratic rally, that the best Negro leaders know they are happiest with their own people. Dr. Johnson said he resented the President's contention that "what Negroes want is justice and not social equality."

He urged support of Henry Wallace for President as the champion of equal rights for members of the Negro race.

Mrs. Virginia Foster Durr, Progressive Party candidate for the Senate from Virginia, charged that "foreign corporations" are able to keep control of that State's industry because they "keep Negro and white workers divided against one another."

Earlier in the day, a "Wallace Caravan," consisting of six of the candidate's rooters, a station wagon and sound apparatus, had toured Alexandria and Arlington on a speaking-singing junket.

Md. Dixiecrat Head Attacks Lane, Tydings

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP).—The chairman of the Maryland States' Rights Democrats said today failure of the party to get on the ballot will cut its expected vote by "more than half."

Chairman E. Steuart Vaughn attacked Governor Lane and Senator Tydings (D., Md.), for failure of the States' Righters to get on the ballot. The Governor last night refused a request to call a special session of the legislature to change the election laws so States rights candidates could have their names on the November ballot.

"Lane and Tydings are too afraid of President Truman's reaction if they gave in that much to the States' Rights sentiment in Maryland," Vaughan charged. He added that both "have brought their own political careers to an end in Maryland because of the widespread sentiment."

The election law change at a special session was the last hope for States' Rights candidates to get on the ballot.

Dixiecrats Ahead in Four Southern States, Make Virginia and Florida Battlegrounds

This analysis of presidential standings in the 13 Southern States completes the first 1948 Nation-wide State-by-State survey of political sentiment by the Gallup Poll. Four previous articles in the series reported on the other 35 States, section by section. Sunday the final article will present new figures for the national popular vote and review the standings in each of the 48 States.

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 14.—The breaking up of the traditional political pattern of the South this year is dramatically shown in the latest Institute poll findings covering the 13 Southern States.

Three States which Democrats have been able to count as "absolutely safe" in most past elections have moved out of the Democratic column and are today under the banner of the anti-Truman States' Rights Party. They are: Mississippi, South Carolina and Alabama, and they have a total of 28 electoral votes. As of today President Truman is not even on the ballot in Alabama.

In a fourth State, Louisiana, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States' Rights nominee, also leads today but by a smaller margin. At the time interviews for this survey were taken Louisiana had not determined which presidential candidates would be on the ballot.

In two other traditionally Democratic States, Florida and Virginia, the Thurmond support is sufficiently strong to turn the presidential election into a nip-and-tuck race between President Truman and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey. The Dixiecrat rebellion gives the Republicans a fighting chance of "cracking" the solid South by making Florida and Virginia real GOP battlegrounds for the first time since 1928.

In short, whereas the Democrats in the past four elections were able to count on more than 140 electoral votes — backbone of Democratic strength—from the 13 Southern States, today the Democrats hold a clear-cut majority in only seven of the 13 with a total of 91 electoral votes.

As of the early part of October, this is the picture of political sentiment in the 13 Southern States:

SOUTHERN SECTION

	Truman	Dewey	Wallace	Thurmond	Undec.
Ala..	*32%	16%	1%	43%	8%
Ark.	55	23	1	12	9
Fla..	33	32	2	19	14

Texas	61	23	3	8	5
Va..	40	43	1	8	8

*Not on ballot when survey was taken.

Less than 1 per cent.

Today's poll report on the South reflects sentiment at a time when the situation as to which candidates will be on the election ballots in many Southern States was confused. In addition, there is uncertainty as to just how the individual candidates will be designated on the ballots in some States.

For instance, in Alabama when the survey was made it had not been definitely determined whether President Truman was on the ballot or not. In Oklahoma, Henry Wallace and Governor Thurmond were not listed and it appeared unlikely that they would be put on the ballot subsequently.

In Louisiana all candidates will be on the ballot, but the traditional rooster ballot symbol of the Democratic Party there is being given to Governor Thurmond, while President Truman apparently will be designated by a new symbol unfamiliar to Louisiana voters.

These standings in the South, therefore, must be interpreted in the light of the unsettled state of affairs in the South and which may have a marked effect on the vote on Election Day. The poll percentages would apply only if all the candidates are on the ballots in the States covered and only if all have equal treatment on the ballots. To the extent that these conditions are not met, today's figures will not reflect the actual situation.

Veteran Tops Art Winners

Pittsburgh, Oct. 14 (AP). — The canvas of Ralph Gleitsmann, 38-year-old Purple Heart veteran of Akron, Ohio, has been awarded first prize of $1500 in the Carnegie Institute's sixth annual exhibition of painting in the United States.

The prize-winning work, titled "Medieval Shadows," is a somber painting of the tattered remnants of a town.

Paintings were submitted by 300 American artists. The jury of award was composed of Alexander Brook and Luigi Lucioni of New York City and John Carroll of East Chatham, N. Y. Homer Saint-Gaudens of the institute was chairman.

Other prize winners and their works included Andrew Wyeth, Chadds Ford, Pa., second prize of $1000, "Christina Olsen;" Karl Zerbe, Boston, Mass., third prize of $700, "The Actors." Honorable mention went to Sidney E. Dickinson, New York City.

Blindness in Premature Babies Reported

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP).—About one in each eight prematurely born babies weighing under three pounds goes blind from a cause not yet understood, two Baltimore eye specialists reported today.

They said that a metabolic imbalance, possibly caused by the special care such infants are given to keep them alive, may or may not be a factor.

By Baltimore Doctors

The report, prepared for the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology by Mrs. William C. Owens and Ella U. Owens of Johns Hopkins University showed:

That the condition develops between the second and sixth months of life and is not congenital and that there is no known treatment.

The condition is called retrolental fibroplasia. The doomed infant develops a peculiar membrane behind the lens of the eye, usually in both eyes, which in most cases goes on to develop into a fibrous structure that fills the eyeball. Blindness usually is permanent and complete.

Study of 34 Babies

In a study of 33 prematurely born babies under 3 pounds, four cases of the condition developed. In 78 other cases in which the babies weighed from 3 to 4½ pounds, only one developed the condition

In speculating on the cause of the condition, the eye specialist said:

"In an effort to compensate for their physiologic immaturity, these infants are often given diets high in protein, large amounts of vitamins, repeated transfusions of blood and plasma, parenteral amino and occasionally hormone therapy. In some premature nurseries penicillin is given prophylatically on admission."

A.T.&T. Proposes Radio-Phone Plan

By The Associated Press

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. recommended yesterday that a large portion of radio-telephone service be brought into the Nation's regular telephone systems.

The recommendation was made to the Federal Communications Commission by T. Brooke Price of New York, the company's general counsel.

His argument, in substance, was this:

A telephone is a telephone whether it employs wires or radio.

A radio-telephone should be looked upon, therefore, as a regular telephone.

The Nation has found that the best way to provide telephone service is through Government-regulated public utility telephone companies.

Therefore, there will be more efficient use of radio frequencies, more people will be served and there will be better service if radio-telephone is operated through telephone companies than through scores of hundreds of private users.

The A. T. & T. proposal is contrary to that of numerous private companies which are seeking use of short-wave radio in businesses. It is also contrary to the Commission's proposed allocations of certain short-wave (high frequency) channels.

Price did not recommend that telephone companies take over all such radio communication. Certain groups have been set aside by the Commission for special treatment—such as police and fire departments, power and petroleum companies and timber cutting firms.

He confined his suggestion to the frequencies which would be made available to "special industrial users."

The big problem, he said, is in 12 large metropolitan areas.

"The main point," he said, "would be to permit the telephone companies in these large cities to provide a coordinated public service available to serve industry instead of having the equivalent frequency space assigned to private systems of businesses. . . .

"Instead of depriving these special industrial people of service, we think this is the right way, and indeed the only way . . . to give them the service they need and at the same time serve the general business community.

"Unless this is done, the assignment of these frequencies to the private uncoordinated systems will mean fewer workable channels, less efficient use of the channels and soon a degree of interference that will be chaotic and intolerable."

New Fraud Charges Filed Against Tucker; First 'Torpedo' Called Redesigned 1942 Olds

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP).—Four plaintiffs obtained Federal court permission today to file a second amended complaint charging Preston T. Tucker, automobile builder, and 17 other defendants with conspiring to defraud stockholders.

Among charges in the amended complaint are:

That the first "Tucker Torpedo," which was advertised as having just come off the assembly lines, was in reality a hand-built, redesigned 1942 Oldsmobile.

That Tucker, president of Tucker Corporation, bought an airplane for $40,000 of the corporation's money and leased it to the company for $6000 a month.

That Tucker used corporation money to buy a home near Bogota, Colombia, South America.

Tucker declared: "The accusations in this petition simply repeat the same unfounded charges that resulted in dismissal of the suit September 23 by Judge Michael Igoe."

The new complaint, admitted by Judge Igoe, alleges that Tucker and 17 defendants conspired to create a voting trust agreement on August 16, 1946.

Through it, the suit states, Tucker, Fred Rockelman, executive vice president of the company, and Hanson Brown, a former vice president and not a defendant, hold all shares of Class B stock.

There are about one million shares of Class B stock, which has the same voting rights as the Class A common stock, the complaint says.

The suit states further that Tucker engaged in fraud by "conniving" with other defendants to manipulate book accounts to show payment of $100,000 for one million shares of Class B stock with a par value of 10 cents a share, thereby creating a voting trust for himself.

Class A stock has a face value of $1 a share.

Rescue Squad Fails to Save Orangutan

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP).—A dying monkey brought out fire department rescue workers today but only after an official ruling that inhalator treatment is not restricted to humans.

Two baby orangutans were brought from New York to Chicago by Robert Bean, director of the Chicago Zoological Gardens. As Bean's train reached Chicago he noticed one of the monkeys was suffering from a respiratory condition.

Bean went to the nearest fire station and asked Capt. Edward Driscoll for an inhalator.

"We have had to work on many characters, but never a monkey," the surprised captain said. His station is in the Skid Row district.

The captain called John Fenn, acting chief fire marshal for advice. "It's a life," Fenn said, "call an inhalator."

Believing a fellow fireman was stricken, inhalator squad two responded to the call to the fire station. They found Tapang, an 18-month-old male orangutan, on a stretcher.

The rescue crew worked over the animal for 30 minutes before a physician pronounced the animal dead. Bean said the two monkeys cost $4,500

Teenage Sex Orgies Uncovered

Milwaukee, Oct. 14 (AP).—A high police official said today that a group involved in extended sexual orgies among teenage white girls and Negro men had been uncovered.

Vice squad probers, he said, have learned from witnesses:

Some of the girls already questioned admitted smoking marijuana and drinking wine and beer at parties with the men, all of whom are Negroes. Admissions of sexual perversion also were obtained.

One 17-year-old girl had relations with 12 boys and men over a weekend. The ages of the girls questioned range from 15 to 17, the men, 17 to 38.

'Whole Will,' Judge Rules

yet to find out and discover evidence."

Questioned later by reporters, Kertz modified this to say more time is needed to find "additional" evidence..

Caldwell earlier had argued unsuccessfully that the issues in the case should be both the will in its entirety and also parts of the will. This, he said, would prevent leaving the jurors in a "quandary" as to whether they could hold a small part of the will invalid without ruling out the whole will.

Also, he declared, the proceedings should be framed "so that as far as possible all people who want to stake out a claim to this property will have a chance . . . and we can settle it for all time."

Caldwell expressed belief that it might be possible for the countess—who is challenging the whole will on grounds including undue influence, duress, coercion and the contention her mother was of "unsound mind" when she executed the document—to later "come in and sue for undue influence as a part."

Judge Morris said he doubted this could be done, and added that it is the duty of the executors to defend the will, "not to go out and seek to preclude issues that may be raised."

After Judge Morris ruled that the trial issue would be the whole will, Caldwell sought assurance from Kertz that the countess was challenging only the validity of the whole will, not parts of insufficient importance to affect the whole document.

Kertz replied:

"I don't think this is the proper time for that."

Judge Morris then noted gravely:

"If you do feel that in these proceedings you have a right to attack any part" of the will, ". . . then I think you ought to amend your petition and I ought to amend my opinion."

Cites Status of Newspaper

In seeking an early trial, Caldwell criticized the will opponents for taking every advantage of time allowed them in the case, while "every day counts" for the executors.

Referring to the Washington Times-Herald which the late Mrs. Patterson owned and published, he said the legal action has caused a "great, going and successful newspaper" to be placed under control of a collector—the Riggs National Bank.

Seventeen minor beneficiaries of the will, who had been receiving weekly or monthly payments from Mrs. Patterson, said Caldwell, are in "needy circumstances," with "three or four of them in desperate circumstances."

Judge Morris, over objections of Kertz, set Nov. 4 as the tentative trial date. Caldwell noted that it will take 10 days to serve notice on all available parties, and the law provides 30 days additional notice for those who cannot be immediately reached. This means the trial could not begin before November 25, he said, and if there is an appeal filed, "we hope to have that tried before the summer recess."

Countess Gizycka, daughter of Mrs. Patterson by her first marriage and former wife of Columnist Drew Pearson, was given $25,000 a year in the will, plus real estate and personal property. She is the sole heir in absence of a valid will.

food industry experts warned against expecting any permanent food price break as long as consumer income and demand remain what they are.

Other than on meat, food here and nationally appeared holding stable, although the Dun and Bradstreet wholesale food index—which shows the comparative cost of food from week to week—hit the lowest point since July 8, 1947.

Veteran Slays Two In Pension Dispute

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 14 (U.P.).—A disabled veteran shot and killed two Veterans Administration employes in their office today with a German pistol.

The gun wielder, identified by police as Bernard V. Lenbits, 47, of Buffalo, reportedly told detectives he became angry over failure to receive a pension.

According to police, Milton A. Jacobs, about 40, chairman of VA Rating Board No. 1, was shot four times in the chest.

Emmett S. Crowe, about 60, a guard and World War I veteran, was shot as he entered Jacobs office.

Other employes called police who overpowered the killer.

Detectives said Lenbits told them he was an Air Force ground crew veteran of World War II. Authorities identified the gun used in the shooting as a World War I souvenir.

Asked if he was suffering from war wounds, Lenbits replied:

"Everybody is trying to wound me. They won't give me my pension."

Accused Slayers; Police Who Broke Case

The Washington Post

ARRIVE AT INQUEST—Lawrence Goodall (center), accused by police as the "trigger man" in the Druggist Johnson murder, steps from police van yesterday to appear at the coroner's inquest at which he declared his innocence. Edward Jackson, jr. (left), also charged with murder, is said by police to be the "lookout man." Police Pvt. E. L. Musselman of Fourth Precinct watches the pair was discussed. Jackson said Goodall told him he would go inside while he (Jackson) remained outside as lookout.

Jackson heard a shot and Goodall came running from the drug store. Goodall told him he had to shoot the man because he was fumbling behind the counter.

They ran to Jackson's house, about three blocks away. Goodall left the weapon, a .45 caliber automatic, and an army jacket he was wearing at Jackson's house, borrowed 50 cents and left.

Jackson gave the automatic to his wife, Myrtle, and told her to get rid of it. She finally left it at an aunt's house.

At this point, Cooke told the coroner's jury the weapon was found later in an alley on L st., between 2d and 3d sts. sw.

The detective told the jurors that while police have charged Goodall as the gunman who fatally shot Johnson, the former has refused to make a statement or admit any guilt in the crime.

Cooke said police investigation disclosed the automatic was purchased by Goodall during a dice game last Sunday.

Miss Thelma L. Lewis, of 1237 2d st. sw., was called and she testified she was with Goodall and another man when he bought the automatic. She said she had identified the pistol at police headquarters.

John Craig, of 366 Dixon ct. sw., testified he was present during the dice game at which the weapon passed into Goodall's hands.

The two were taken to the District Jail after the inquest.

Police claimed one of the speediest solutions on record of a holdup killing in the Johnson case. Both Jackson and Goodall were in police custody less than 24 hours after the murder.

Capt. Robert V. Murray, acting chief of detectives, and Lieut. Jeremiah Flaherty, head of the homicide squad, who were in charge of the investigation, had special praise for six members of the force for their work on the case. They were:

Pvts. Norman Gray and Alfred Corfield of the Fourth Precinct who arrested Jackson at his home six hours after the slaying.

Pvts. Robert J. Reed and M. E. Washington of the Fourth Precincit who recovered the weapon and obtained information leading to Goodall.

Detective Sergts. Cooke and Richard Felber who after others had questioned Jackson without success obtained a statement from him.

2d Operation Leaves Pamela 'Doing Fine'

Chicago, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Pamela Lamphere, whose parents went to a divorce court over whether she should undergo three dangerous operations, underwent the second successful operation today.

Pamela, who was born with a rare bladder malformation, underwent the second most important of three major operations which may save her life.

Dr. Karl A. Meyer, director of the Cook County Hospital, who performed the operation, said "everything went according to plan."

"Little Pamela is doing fine," he said.

The first operation was performed September 22. Meyer said the final one will be performed in three or four weeks if everything goes right.

Pamela's parents, Fred, 23, and Irene, 21, separated temporarily over the operations but have been reconciled.

Lutherans Exhorted to Evangelism

Philadelphia, Oct. 14 (AP).—The United Lutheran Church in America today ended its sixteenth biennial convention, urging each of its 4000 congregations "to become more aggressive in winning the unchurched to Jesus Christ."

Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, ULCA president, told the 576 delegates in the closing session of their nine-day meeting:

"If America ceases to be a bulwark for Christianity, then God's strongest potential human ally will have fallen out of the struggle."

The ULCA asked its congregations "to offer prayers unceasingly" in behalf of Bishop Lajos Ordass of Hungary, sentenced early this month to two years in prison.

The ULCA chose Des Moines, Iowa, for its 1950 convention.

which pays the bills of needy hospital patients, it will be short about $37,000 by December, Keyes said. This deficit must be absorbed by the hospitals, already operating at a loss, he pointed out.

"Only a completely successful 1949 campaign will avoid a repetition of this experience," Keyes warned.

Dr. Macatee Honored

Dr. Henry Macatee, former president of the Hospital Service Agency, was named "Red Feather Citizen" of the day, for his services to the agency which certifies the need of patients aided by the Hospitalization Fund. The award was presented by Miss Phyllis Sliney, Children's Hospital nurse, and Billy Hardy, her 6-year-old former patient.

The Hospitalization Fund helped pay the bills when Billy burned himself severely with boiling broth, and spent over two months in the hospital under 24-hour nursing care, Miss Sliney explained.

Next General Report luncheon will be held at 12:30 p. m. Thursday at the Washington Hotel. Government campaign workers will hold a unit report meeting Monday at 12:30 p. m., Business Units 1 and II will report Tuesday at 12:30 p. m. and the Residential Unit will report on Wednesday at 12:30 p. m., all in the Washington Hotel.

Graziano, Aided Nazis To Hurt 'Hated' British

Rome, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Fascist Marshal Rodolfo Graziani told a war crimes tribunal today that he helped Nazi armies only because of a German threat to scorch the Italian earth and because "I hate the British."

Red-faced from anger and shouting, Graziani told the court he did not "particularly" like the Germans but "will always hate the British for having been the ruin of Italy."

Now, that's what I call good coffee!
A cup of good coffee, savory and mellow, is one of the world's most delightful experiences. And anyone can make it! It takes some care, of course, but it's easy, if you follow these simple rules:
It begins with a fine blend of coffee, Hills Bros. Coffee, that's rich in flavor and really fresh.
It requires a coffee-maker that's sparkling clean. A quick rinse with hot water is not enough. A good rule is to wash your coffee-maker with soap and water every time you use it. When it gets battered and brown-beyond-cleaning, you'll be doing your coffee a favor if you replace the old coffee-maker with a new one.
It depends on accurate measuring of water and coffee and careful timing of the brew. For coffee rich in flavor as well as strength, 2 level tablespoons of coffee are recommended for each 6 oz. cup of water.
Coffee should be in contact with water for a definite length of time, depending on the type and capacity of the coffee-maker, as well as the strength of beverage desired. After the correct timing has been determined, stick to it; otherwise results will not be uniform.
Coffee is at its best when you serve it fresh-made and piping hot (the delicate flavor is injured by cooling and reheating) . . . and when it has been brewed in a maker of proper size (you can't make 2 cups of satisfying coffee in an 8-cup maker).
Made correctly, Hills Bros. Coffee brings you a wonderful goodness that's deliciously its own. It's a blend of the world's finest coffees, and "Controlled Roasting," an exclusive Hills Bros. process, assures uniform flavor in every pound. The fragrant freshness of Hills Bros. Coffee is treasured in vacuum-packed cans.
What kind of coffee-maker do you use... coffeepot • percolator • vacuum-type maker • drip pot? Hills Bros. tell you how to get the best results with any type of coffee-maker in the 28-page booklet—"The Art of Coffee-Making." Send the coupon below for your free copy.

Cashier Tells Police Details of Holdup

Members of the Metropolitan Police robbery squad held a four-hour interview yesterday with Miss Joyce Dennis, 22-year-old Navy Department cashier who was robbed of $4000 in payroll funds Wednesday after being threatened with a knife.

Lieut. E. E. Scott, head of the robbery squad, said no arrests, however, had been made late yesterday. The Public Buildings Administration also was conducting an investigation, to determine how the thief slipped past Navy Department guards shortly before noon Wednesday in executing his daring holdup.

Miss Dennis reported a man clad in khaki work clothes came to her office at 18th st. and Constitution ave. nw. and said he was a plumber sent to repair a radiator.

The cashier said she knew the radiator was out of order, so she permitted the man to enter.

He then pulled a long-bladed knife and ordered her to open the safe, she reported. The man grabbed a canvas money bag, containing $4000, and then bound the girl's arms, legs and hands and thrust a gag into her mouth, she said.

After he escaped, Miss Dennis slipped the gag from her mouth and freed her hands enough to telephone for help.

Police said they were handicapped in their investigation by the unexplained fact that the robbery was not reported by the Navy Department for more than an hour.

Halls Indicted In Slaying of Policeman

Thomas Hall, 55, and his daughter, Janie Lee Hall, 20, both of 5312 Maple rd., Deanwood Park, Md., were indicted for murder yesterday by the Prince Georges County grand jury.

The Halls were arrested June 12 after a melee at a house at 5312 Nye st., Deanwood Park, in which a county policeman, Pvt. Charles F. Caldwell, and Hall's wife, Mabel, were fatally injured.

Pvt. Caldwell died of bullet wounds in Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, Md., an hour after the fracas and Mrs. Hall in Freedmen's Hospital within two hours from head injuries.

Another county policeman, Pvt. Wallace L. Baker, was shot in the leg and chest. He has since returned to duty as a desk clerk in the Hyattsville station.

Hall, a 6-foot-3½-inch stone cutter, was treated for chest wounds received in the struggle.

The Halls are expected to be arraigned today in Princes Georges County Circuit Court in Marlboro.

Court Orders Kennel Owner To Stop Dogs From Barking

Claude Williams, owner of Ashton Kennels, yesterday was given until October 25 to quiet the barking of his canine boarders.

The deadline was set by the Montgomery County Circuit Court in a decree signed by Judge Stedman Prescott as a result of an injunction suit filed against Williams by his Ashton, Md., neighbor, Sam Rice, former Washington outfielder.

Rice in his suit charged the noise from Williams' kennels kept him from "reasonable use and comfortable enjoyment of his property." The court agreed.

A dog fancier as well as a kennel operator, Williams has boarded canines belonging to such personages as Winston Churchill, Henry Wallace and Marlene Dietrich.

But a dog owned by a celebrity makes just as much noise as any other, the court has held and ruled that Williams must devise a method of quieting the yips.

Yesterday's decree ordered him to come up with the solution by October 25 and he was also told to pay court costs of $367.70.

'Belinda' Should Shame Scoffers

By Richard L. Coe

IT HAS BECOME and remained the fashion in recent years to sniff critically at melodrama. Pushover situations are sneered upon and a heroine who shoots a villain in defense of her child is quite likely to be regarded as hopelessly old hat.

Every so often, though, someone successfully makes the knowing elite swallow the trick, and such a film is the Warner's "Johnny Belinda." Thanks to a sensitive, restrained performance by Jane Wyman in the role of a deaf, speechless lass, "Johnny Belinda" is a moving, often fine, film.

The picture stems from a stage play of some eight years ago by Elmer Harris. It is a more persuasive film than it was on the stage, though that is no reflection on the fine, still memorable performance of Helen Craig as the heroine. Miss Craig's performance was one of the most striking of its season and small wonder, for it's a part to be relished by any sincere player.

Belinda is the daughter of a Cape Breton farmer, deaf since babyhood, and unable to do any but the humblest chores around the Nova Scotian farm. An understanding young doctor comes to the village, meets Belinda by chance and soon is teaching her the rudiments of communication that are such a bitter obstacle to the deaf.

Effective Direction

Gradually, Belinda takes on the charm of a young lady, catching the attention of the village bounder. Without comprehending what has happened to her, she bears his illegitimate child. The villagers, ever scornful of the "dummy" and of strangers, too, assign the paternity to the friendly doctor. When his practice becomes hopelessly estranged, he leaves to try to find a better home for Belinda; the villain, though married, now fancies the child and desires to adopt it. When he comes to take the baby, Belinda shoots im and is foisted into a bitter court trial.

Yes, the story is increasingly melodramatic, if you like, but it has been handled with pictorial insight by Director Jean Negulesco and effectively acted by the central characters.

Wyman's Eyes and Hands

Negulesco's camera skill in making the California coast seem the lonely reaches of Cape Breton takes full advantage of summoning a reality beyond the powers of the stage. His simple interiors, weathered farm houses and fishing boats are finely flavored and a combination of insight and restraint make the film flow smoothly.

Miss Wyman's poignant skill indeed makes her Belinda one of the genuine feminine performances of the year. She has spared none of the plainness essential to the part; she speaks worlds with her eyes and her expressive hands remind one how ignorant many players are of this potential. If only for Miss Wyman's able make believe, you should see "Johnny Belinda."

Nor should one ignore a forceful, understanding portrayal by Charles Bickford as her father. Ever a rewarding actor, Bickford is at his best here. And Lew Ayres, too, brings the patient doctor to life.

In short, an absorbing picture, thoughtfully produced.

"JOHNNY BELINDA," a Warner Bros. picture produced by Jerry Wald, directed by Jean Negulesco, screenplay by Irmgard von Cube and Allen Vincent from the stage play by Elmer Harris. At the Warner.

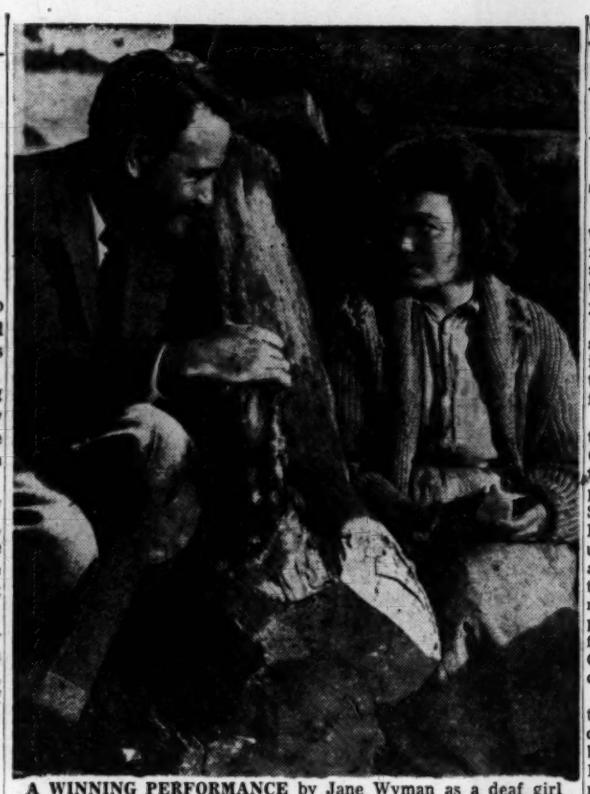
Advertising Club of Washington . . . The diplmatic turnout promises to resemble a U. N. meeting . . . As if to appease the ghosts of the players who once brought life to the theater, "The Red Shoes" boasts an intermission, during which, it is presumed, the snazzy folk will admire one another's turnouts as well as the chandeliers and other gloss its owner poured into the theater . . . But the ghosts won't be placated.

ANOTHER EVENT TONIGHT is Catholic University's "King Lear," which has been directed by Basil Langton, who did so well by last summer's "Heartbreak House" . . . Last year's experiment with an entire season of manuscript plays now is but an instructive memory and the drama department's admirers look forward to at least a taste of the living theater which the National no longer chooses to give us.

"STAR DUST," by Catholic U.'s Walter Kerr, is the first choice of the Mount Vernon Players' upcoming season, with tryouts to be held Saturday morning at 10 at the Mount Vernon Place Church, 900 Massachusetts ave. nw. . . . The comedy is to run from November 18 through December 4 . . . For further information call Helen Brewer, DIstrict 1484, after 7 in the evening.

THE THEATER GUILD'S Bess Davis Schreiner is back for her regular office hours off the mezzanine lobby of the National, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons from noon until 5 . . . She'll prove helpful to local Guild subscribers in the matter of "Hamlet" tickets and be glad to fill in on Guild activities elsewhere . . . Elsewhere is it.



A WINNING PERFORMANCE by Jane Wyman as a deaf girl highlights the Warner's "Johnny Belinda." Miss Wyman here is searching for help from the young doctor who befriends her, Lew Ayres

Charm at the Capitol

Montgomery Takes Command And 'Saxon' Turns Out Fine

By Orval Hopkins

THE world's stinkers, generally speaking, are much more fun to have around than the straightforward, upright model, a conclusion I will assume requires no further proof. More fun, that is, if you don't have to be too near them. Rasputin and Lizzie Borden, seen from about here, are fascinating characters. Working in close, they might give you that uncomfortable feeling.

Robert Montgomery plays one of these generic heels in "The Saxon Charm," now at the Capitol theater, and it's as satisfying a film portrayal as you could ask. Matt Saxon, patterned after a man in Frederic Wakeman's novel, is an unscrupulous, ruthless egocentric and, as played by Montgomery, a thoroughly hateful party. I haven't read Wakeman's book, but I am perfectly willing to give full credit for this job to Montgomery and to Claude Binyon, who wrote and directed the screen play.

The story is unimportant, particularly when stacked against the characterization bestowed upon us by Montgomery, but it concerns a Broadway producer and his efforts, mostly successful, to foul up some other people's lives. Montgomery is wonderful. He is almost the whole show, as they say, and I wouldn't for a moment deter anybody who's heading for the Capitol to see him.

Not So All

Not all of the other performers in this one are up to it. I have always had sort of a grouse on about John Payne and I'd have to say he's worse here than he's ever been. His acting is mostly revolting mannerisms and he falls sadly shy when the camera swings to him from Montgomery. The sequence of Mongomery coaching Audrey Totter in how to get her song across (before I, for heaven sake, forget it) is a real pleasure.

"THE SAXON CHARM." Universal-International release, produced by Joseph Sistrom. Screen play by Claude Binyon from the novel by Frederic Wakeman. Photography by Milton Krasner. Directed by Binyon. At the Capitol.

THE CAST

Matt Saxon.....Robert Montgomery
Janet Busch.....Susan Hayward
Eric Busch.....John Payne
Alma.....Audrey Totter
Herman.....Henry Morgan
Zack Humber.....Harry Von Zell
Dolly Humber.....Cara Williams
Captain Chatham.....Chill Wills
Vivian Saxon.....Heather Angel

Payne plays a young playwright, very badly.

Susan Hayward is his wife, and I was a little disappointed. Miss Totter does well enough as the producer's girl friend; Henry Morgan (not that Henry) is very good as Montgomery's right hand man; Harry Von Zell, the radio announcer, is surprisingly acceptable as a sappy Broadway angel, and Chill Wills is very funny as the captain of a yacht. Good writing, good directing and a top hole job by Montgomery make this a good movie. The director, to be sure, appears to have been out having a beer when Payne's scenes were shot, but it's nice entertainment, nonetheless.

The censor, incidentally, must have also stepped out for a minute at one point. Payne and Miss Hayward are shown in their pajamas. They kiss, and Payne says, "Sometimes I forget what I married you for in the first place." Her not at all coy reply is, "Come on," and off they trot.

The newsreel offers some good World Series and football shots, as well as some campaign scenes featuring you-know-who and his worthy opponent.

Insurance Man Called Embezzler

A Washington insurance firm owner yesterday was charged with embezzling $8495 from the funds of a Damascus, Md., bank, of which he is vice president and director.

He is William C. Strasser, 40, who owns and operates an insurance company at 2100 14th st. nw. Arrested yesterday afternoon by FBI agents in the office of his attorney, Alvin Newmyer, he was taken before U. S. Commissioner Cyril Lawrence, who continued the hearing to November 4. Strasser was released under $2500 bond.

"There seems to be a misunderstanding," Newmyer said later. "We are going to have a conference with representatives of the bank. I think the matter will be adjusted."

An FBI spokesman gave the following version of the embezzlement charge:

Strasser's insurance firm handles personal and auto loans for the Damascus Bank. Funds collected on these loans by the insurance company are then deposited to an account under its name in the National Capital Bank of Washington.

These funds, however, are the property of the Damascus Bank and are insured for that bank under the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., a Government agency.

An apparent shortage of $8495 was discovered by the FDIC in a recent routine check. This information was passed on to the FBI, which then acted on a complaint, issued by United States Attorney Bernard Flynn in Baltimore, Md., in which jurisdiction the Damascus Bank lies.

Further details of the alleged shortage were not revealed by the FBI. Newmyer stated only that the details would come out at the scheduled hearing.

The FBI said, however, that the FDIC is still investigating the Damascus Bank's funds in the Washington bank.

Strasser is married and the father of three children. He lives at 608 Aspen st. nw.

Charter Decision

Chief Judge Marbury's opinion in the Montgomery County charter case proves to be, now that the written text is available, not only a clearing away of technical objections to the charter but also a broadening of the scope within which home rule may function in the county. The lower court had presumed to require amendment of the charter before it could be voted on in November. The contention was that a provision of the charter authorizing the proposed county council to pass its budget in June was in violation of the State constitutional provision that legislative action of such bodies must be taken in May. Maryland's Court of Appeals simply recognized the well defined distinction between lawmaking in the constitutional sense and the approval of appropriations.

This seems to us to make sense, and it is particularly welcome to the advocates of the Montgomery County charter because it will have the effect of releasing the proposed council from a strait jacket in the making and altering of its budget. The court has followed the best tradition of the bench in removing obstacles to efficient government when that can be done within the broad concept of a constitution as basic law. As a result of this enlightened decision, the voters of Montgomery County need not fear that the county-manager system they are asked to approve would be pinched between narrow legal concepts. Certainly the result of the decision is to enhance the value of home rule under the proposed charter and to increase the favorable prospect that the charter will be adopted in the referendum next month.

Bipartisan Policy

The sniping that is being exchanged between Governor Dewey and President Truman is putting a severe strain upon the country's bipartisan foreign policy. By its nature a bipartisan policy is the product of both major parties. Neither could be fully responsible for it. By the same token neither can claim full credit, or even a major part of the credit for it, without jeopardizing the basis on which cooperation in the national interest has been attained. Both Mr. Dewey's speech at Louisville on Tuesday and President Truman's speech at St. Paul on Wednesday night seem to us to detract from the objective of maintaining American foreign policy above the reach of politics.

Mr. Dewey's remarks were the more surprising because he had previously avoided claiming the lion's share of credit for the bipartisan foreign policy for his own party. At Louisville he was not content to assert that it was he who first suggested to former Secretary of State Hull a program of two-party cooperation. He also declared that it was Republican leaders who wrote the principles of justice and international law into the United Nations Charter, worked out a formula for regional defense agreements unimpaired by the veto, and established the obligation of colonial powers to work for self-government in their territories. Moreover, he observed, until the Republicans rescued it the European Recovery Program "started out to be just another handout."

If there is anything that has characterized ERP from the beginning, as Mr. Dewey ought to know, it is that the program has not been "just another handout." That is its particular genius, and the concept of self-help was clearly developed in Secretary Marshall's speech of June 5, 1947, which is generally conceded to be the genesis of ERP. Specifically, he said:

> . . . Any assistance this Government may render in the future should provide a cure rather than a mere palliative . . . Before the United States Government can proceed much further in its efforts to alleviate the situation and help start the European world on its way to recovery, there must be some agreement among the countries of Europe as to the requirements of the situation and the part those countries themselves will take in order to give proper effect to whatever action might be undertaken by this Government.

Doubtless Governor Dewey has been needled into his remarks by some of President Truman's extravagant boasts. He is right, moreover, in asserting that the Republicans played an important part in securing adoption of the measures he mentions. But the essence of bipartisanship is that it is evolved from the best efforts of the leaders of both parties working in the common interest of American security. Any attempt to break the bipartisan policy down into individual contributions is a contradiction in terms, bound to lead to a political grab-bag that debases the policy itself. Regardless of the provocation he may have had, Mr. Dewey detracts from his own stature by attempting to parcel out credit for something that in the best sense is indivisible.

Family Reunion

All reports from London so far tell of an extraordinary and almost unexpected cordiality in the meetings of the Commonwealth Conference. Even Pandit Nehru, who heretofore has insisted that India should exercise its privilege of becoming a republic outside the Commonwealth, is said to show signs of a change of heart. The atmosphere of good fellowship at the outset is most encouraging, because it may lubricate some of the underlying problems of Commonwealth relations that are certain to come to a head in the next week.

For this gathering of nine "sovereign and independent nations" in the Commonwealth—one, Southern Rhodesia, is a self-governing colony and a tenth, Eire, is conspicuous by its sovereign and independent absence—bears within it the seeds of division as well as the needs of cooperation. The British Commonwealth, along with the rest of the world, is directly affected by the postwar polarization of power. No longer can the Dominions look only or even primarily to London as the source and center of their economic welfare and strategic security. The United States is now a magnet that willy-nilly exerts a competing attraction. And at the same time the position of the United Kingdom as a cornerstone of European recovery and a bulwark of western union inevitably pulls it away from exclusive Commonwealth ties.

The influence of American policy on this tug-of-peace is not entirely passive, by any means. The success of the European Recovery Program demands unprecedented steps of economic cooperation among the recipient nations and the United States has insistently pressed this aim upon Britain as well as the others. The conflict with what used to be called "imperial preference," i. e., special tariff and trade arrangements among members of the Commonwealth, is obvious. So is the disparity between a close defensive alignment of Britain with the western European nations and one in which Britain preserves an offshore posture in loose partnership with its distant and non-European Dominions.

The Labor government has recognized Britain's unavoidable status as a European nation, bound to the economic and military fate of its nearest neighbors. A Conservative government, despite the "imperial" oratory at its recent annual conference, could have made no other realistic decision. At the moment the choice is up to the Dominions whether to make the best of the facts or resist what cannot be denied. We hope the promise of a cordial beginning will be fulfilled in a thorough mutual understanding of the problems of all the members of the British family. They are all our friends, and their future is clearly dependent upon closer cooperation among all democratic powers.

Uncertain Liberties

Once a year the Civil Liberties Union sums up the forward and the backward steps in the never-ending struggle to assure the enjoyment of constitutional rights to every citizen. Its annual report for the year ended last July 31 discloses a balance sheet both positive and negative. In its list of court rulings, legislative actions, and other public policy decisions, the favorable items outnumber the unfavorable 48 to 34. Extension of the civil rights of racial minorities in particular showed advances greater than in years. But these tangible demonstrations of progress, the report points out, "do not reflect the adverse atmosphere of so critical a period, nor the restraints and repression growing out of fears of war and of communism."

Nothing can detract from the everlasting credit due any gain in practical application of civil liberties principles. But the looming threats for the future, in our opinion, outweigh in importance the concrete advances of the moment. With some shameful exceptions, the activities of public officials today have not paralleled the brutal disregard of individual liberties that took place 28 years ago after the First World War. But the state of the public mind on "radicalism" is not dissimilar to the excited hysteria of those other postwar days. A growing willingness to believe that unpopular ideas can be combated by suppressing their expression and prosecuting their exponents bodes ill for freedom of thought and speech in years ahead.

The current disposition to crack down on everything that is or smacks of being communistic is easy to understand. It arises out of the increasingly tense and embittered state of our relations with the Soviet Union. Anything that appears to contribute, however remotely, to the national security gains the color of justification in such an atmosphere. An innocent man's reputation destroyed, as one member of Congress has put it, is less important than the Nation's safety and must be sacrificed to it if necessary. How the smearing of any number of reputations can contribute to national security has not yet been explained; but that is not the point here. The issue for America lies in the precise point that our system guarantees the citizen against arbitrary state action. We emphatically deny the totalitarian concept that the welfare of the state takes precedence over the rights and the dignity of the individual.

The prospect of either a prolonged cold war with Russia or an early hot one is therefore a matter of vital importance to the liberties of all of us. We risk losing the battle before it starts unless we can hold the goal clearly and calmly before our eyes. The way to oppose communism in our midst is by free and open discussion and competition, not by suppression of freedom.

Rising Price Of Peace

Senator Flanders conveys an erroneous impression when he says that the Marshall Plan is "becoming diverted from its original purpose of European recovery into a means of rearming Europe." The law clearly provides that Marshall Plan aid shall be used to increase agricultural and industrial production, stabilize finances, and promote trade in Europe. It is our understanding that the Economic Cooperation Administration is adhering rigidly to these objectives, which do not include military aid. What the Senator was probably referring to is the current demand for additional aid to buttress the military strength of the democratic powers of western Europe. It is unfortunate that the question of helping Europe arm for self-defense should be confused with diversion of the Marshall Plan from its original purpose. The present issue is rather one of supplementing ERP.

Undoubtedly the aggressive maneuverings of the Soviet Union have put the United States in a difficult position. Having accepted, as a responsibility to our own national safety, a large share of the burden of rehabilitating European economy, we are finding that something more is needed. Russian efforts to sabotage the ERP are not limited to purely economic tactics. Every rattle of the Soviet saber is likewise a calculated attack on the reestablishment of stability in western Europe. If the nations we wish to help back to firm ground are not to lose hope before the threat of a new invasion, the United States must supply them with the means of military defense as well as of economic revival.

European recovery, thus, becomes not simply a matter of economic blood-transfusions or simply a matter of military rearmament. Neither one is possible without the other and the United States cannot but look at both sides of the coin. The strain on our own economy will be tremendous, which again is a purpose of the Kremlin. Not peace, not war, but chaos is the Russian aim, and it includes hopefully a breakdown of capitalism in America. Here lies the real reason for our difficulties. Disorder is relatively easy to foster, while order and stability are relatively hard to achieve. Because we stand for the latter our road is inevitably the more difficult, regardless of how effectively the Russians pursue their objective of sowing discord.

Nevertheless, we need not despair. The lengths to which the Kremlin is going in trying to upset European recovery reflect how well it is already succeeding. Now is not the time to pull back, as Senator Flanders would surely agree. We are engaged in a struggle not for world domination but for peace and prosperity. If the cost comes high, the price of failure would be far more.

Unworkable

The mischief resulting from that provision of the Taft-Hartley Act requiring elections among workers before union shop agreements can become legal is pointedly illustrated by the breakdown of plans for such elections in the building trades industry. Robert N. Denham, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, had laid plans for elections among workers in the building and construction industry in some 600 to 700 separate areas. One preliminary election of this type had been held, and a second experimental election covering all kinds of building and construction labor was scheduled to be held in the Detroit area. It had to be dropped when the Home Builders Association refused to cooperate.

The difficulty of holding such elections in the building trades can be readily appreciated. Workers are on one job today and another tomorrow. Apparently the NLRB has found it impracticable to hold referendums among the employes of each individual contractor. The area-wide vote seemed to be the only feasible means of complying with the law. Even this method, it is estimated, would have cost the Government $1,500,000. Now that the NLRB general counsel has had to abandon it, there seems no way of giving this section of the Taft-Hartley Act prompt effect in the construction industry.

Here, as we have previously pointed out, is certainly one section of the labor law passed by the Eightieth Congress that ought to be repealed. Experience has shown that workers almost invariably favor the union shop when the NLRB conducts referendums, as it is now doing at the rate of 3000 a month. So uniform is their answer to this question that rank and file preference for a union shop, where union officials seek to obtain a contract on that basis, may be taken for granted. The rigmarole of conducting elections on this point has been costly and time-consuming for the NLRB, and apparently it is utterly infeasible as applied to the building trades. The new Congress ought to make repeal of this requirement one of its first objectives.

ALL NIGHT THE SEA

I heard all night the sea
Rising and falling heavily on the land.
I heard all night the sea, all night the sea,
Pouring its sorrow on the sand.

I listened in the dark
Knowing its grief no greater than my own,
Though it was wailing loud upon the land
And I was dumb as stone.

Social Significance

There was so much that was good in R. R.'s letter on a "Newspaper Court" in your issue of October 7 that it was too bad that he went off the deep end in its penultimate paragraph.

As I understand it, R. R. proposes to turn the hard working reporter into a combination political scientist, economist, criminologist and psychoanalyst—a superman capable of detecting and interpreting the social science component of every story he turns in. Now even in the remote event that a reporter had such a tremendous endowment I doubt whether the average intelligent reader of the newspaper would want him to exercise it.

The reader wants nothing more in the news columns, I believe, than honest, objective reporting of the event, preferring to assess its social significance, if any, for himself. He assuredly doesn't want the "social science component" served up second hand, particularly when he has no way of determining the training or fitness of the server, or the premise from which he starts.

It is, I have always assumed, the function of the editorial writer to comment upon and interpret the news and to extract from it whatever significance it may contain. And even in this department the editorial head seems to nod at times. Just two columns away in the same issue of The Washington Post the playful editorial commentator, in analyzing the first World Series baseball game, said,

"Mr. Boudreau . . . decided that the stage must be set for a double play by . . . obliging the pitcher, Mr. Sain . . . to hit along the ground . . . Mr. Feller must have thrown his first pitch to Sain an inch or so too high, for Sain sent the ball into right field where it was caught."

That conclusion must have brought a great deal of anguished consternation to many followers of baseball who have always heretofore believed that a pitcher threw 'em high when he wanted the ball batted to the ground and low when he wanted 'em popped up.

When it comes to searching out the social science component my hat is off to Herblock. For a long time I have maintained that he is one of our greatest living cartoonists, I now withdraw that judgment and substitute for it the conviction that he is one of the great t cartoonists of all time. His recent cartoons have been masterpieces of shrewd political commentary. That De Gaulle one, in particular, was a honey.

Arlington Anomaly

Arlington school improvers are chuckling over the recent development in Arlington's hotly contested county board race.

Early in the contest, school improvement forces backing Lee Potter, who is running on an independent nonpartisan school improvement platform, feverishly attempted to induce other independent candidates to withdraw in order not to divide the vote favoring the greatly needed Arlington school construction program. It was believed by many that the additional independent candidates were induced to run by those in league with the county "machine" in an effort to divide the vote of the large segment of independent voters desiring improved schools, and thereby to assure a "machine" victory.

However, the "machine" scheme to divide and conquer, if such it was, has taken an unexpected turn which will likely backfire against the "machine" candidate. The two independent splinter candidates have joined the "machine" candidate in failing to indorse the proposed school bond issue of $4,750,000, the keystone of the school improvement program, and have left Mr. Potter as the only candidate to indorse the bond issue.

Thus, it appears that Mr. Potter will receive the solid support of Arlington voters seeking improvement in Arlington's greatly overcrowded schools whereas the "machine" candidate will have to share the vote of the "aginners."

Falls Church Negroes

Recently the Falls Church park committee celebrated the growth of Falls Church into a city after 300 years of community existence. The pageant in Crossman's grove began with the settlement of a small group of Englishmen fleeing from the Roundheads of Oliver Cromwell's time. The story told depicted the many events from the days of running away the Indians down through the Revolutionary and Civil Wars to present days. The part the Negro and Indian descendants still about the environs of the town—now a city—played in the development was not mentioned.

This writer himself descended in part from Chief John Logan, a relative of Powhatan who was killed by Col. Charles Broadwater's men who were running the Indians off the lands owned by a Lord Ravensworth. A papoose saved from the massacre was named after an English soldier, Andrew Hicks, and was raised by the Fitzhugh family. He was my great-great-grandfather. We still have the powder horn inscribed: Col. Charles Broadwater, 1536, owned by that family and lost on the day of the killing of Chief John. In those days there was much miscegenation. The typical blue eyes and light skins of many of the Foote and Hicks family, most of whom were never slaves, attests to the mixtures.

One of the later Footes, Fred Foote, was a town councilman and other colored citizens occupied prominent positions in building the community. This Fred Foote had the largest general commodities store in the town at the corner of Broad and Washington sts. adjoining the old Falls Church, a part of which property has come down to remain still in our family. The work of shoemaking, and many other trades was done by the colored citizens. The present stone masonry of the bank building was the work of colored masons, and the stone in most of the stone buildings of the town came from a quarry operated by the Tinners. In all of the wars colored citizens have gone forth to defend our country.

The pageant should have shown something of the contributions colored citizens have made towards the growth of the city of Falls Church, and many of us hope the day is not far distant when again the two groups can reassociate on terms of mutual respect and helpfulness.

Red Feather

I wish some life could be injected into this year's Red Feather campaign. Washington's social agencies just can't cope with many of the requests of people who call on them for help and guidance.

Last spring I was a volunteer worker at the Christ Child House, whose financial maintenance depends in part on Community Chest aid. I saw first hand what happens when settlement house tries to do a good job with too small funds, an overworked, underpaid staff, and constant competing demands on the meager equipment. One day it was down to the last layette for needy, expectant mothers.

It had a cooking class for the neighborhood girls, which provided good training in home economics and a healthy pursuit for these teen-agers. It had to stop it—no more funds.

Children of all ages streamed in daily after school, wanting to have the advantage of the settlement, but there weren't always enough workers to sponsor all the activities needed by the youngsters. Yes, there were volunteers; there were the patient, resourceful and tireless staff, but without adequate funds there was no way of obtaining materials needed to carry out the desired program. Christ Child House was doing its best, but its best was far from what could be done.

Hard work and enthusiasm will carry an organization like this through much of its challenge, but these qualities have to be bolstered by the active indorsement of an interested community Better luck to the 1948 Red Feather campaign.

Paris Opera Ballet

Washington's disadvantage in having no decent concert hall was never so obvious as during the recent visit of the Paris Opera Ballet. That the ballet turned in such magnificent performances despite the handicaps of its surroundings is the greatest tribute to its artistry.

It's not just that the stage is so small and the dancing must be performed without scenery. It's bad enough when the ballerina executing a maneuver puts her foot through the backdrop because she hasn't room to turn properly. This is due to the natural limitations of the hall.

But there's no excuse for the fantastically inept lighting which was displayed at the performance on Thursday night. Sometimes the spotlight was on the audience, sometimes on the ceiling, and almost never where it belonged. At one point the operator apparently dropped in a blue slide by mistake and then tried to take it out, with the resulting flicker and jump which reminded one of the ta-ra-ra days of vaudeville when spinning red and white lights were considered the finishing touches to a whirlwind climax.

Let's hope the Paris Opera Ballet doesn't judge this country's artistic potential by its experience here. Someone in authority should apologize to the troupe for thus marring what was otherwise a flawless performance.

Washington Calling

Dewey's Campaign

THE SHREWD managers of the Dewey campaign who named this train the Victory Special knew exactly what they were about. It is part of the atmosphere of success skillfully cultivated from the outset and which now glows like a Technicolor sunrise.

But they might have given this highly efficient train an even more portentous name—they might have called it the Destiny Special. For over it hangs a large air of destiny and great events to come.

You can almost hear, offstage, a supercharged orchestra playing Pomp and Circumstance or, even, Hail to the Chief, and, incidentally, a few local bands in their fine Republican zeal have anticipated events to greet Governor Dewey with the stirring anthem customarily reserved for the President of the United States.

A great deal has been written about the clockwork skill and the split-second timing with which this campaign is being run. It is made to sound at times as though it were a kind of mean trick to put over on the simple homespun rival who is telling the folks in county-fair style.

WHAT THIS ignores is the origin and background of the skill. It should surprise no one that after six years as Governor of New York and one previous contest for the Presidency, the Dewey campaign moves like greased lightning. Or, it might be more accurate to say, greased lightning slowed to proper tempo for television cameras.

The key is the New York governorship. Within the confines of the most populous and wealthy State in the Union is every problem and every conflict—social, economic, racial.

The Governor who learns to manage these problems has a running head-start for the Presidency, both as administrator and politician. It is not accident that, as Warren Moscow points out in his useful and highly readable book, Politics in the Empire State, in 14 of the 20 presidential campaigns since the end of the war, at least one of the principal nominees was a New Yorker.

There are striking parallels between Dewey and certain of his immediate predecessors in the Governor's chair at Albany. Both Al Smith and Franklin D. Roosevelt developed the same skill in public management and the same adroitness in political campaigning. There are striking differences, too. Al Smith retained the accent and something of the heartiness of his early days on the Fulton Street Fish Wharves. Roosevelt was the Hudson Valley aristocrat, tempered by a brush with death and long invalidism.

Dewey has no strong individual personality stamp. This is one reason he is often called synthetic, an adjective his enemies sometimes applied to Roosevelt. It is significant that Dewey is the first candidate for the Presidency who was born in the twentieth century. This is preeminently the century of the advertising man, the publicist, the highly paid specialist in influence, and New York is the center of the influence industry. Small wonder, then, that around Dewey there should have developed a group of experts who synthesize his personality and his considerable skills.

IN THE VERY expertness of his campaign, he may be laying up future trouble for himself. His promises are general. They are broad enough to cover almost everyone. Issues are not specifically discussed.

But the time is coming on or about January 21, when Dewey will have to begin making some tough decisions, it will not be possible to please almost everyone. The question is whether he will have prepared the public for what he must do when he becomes President.

The Roosevelt experience again suggests a parallel. In 1936 FDR, running for his second term against a backdrop of almost certain victory, conducted what was in effect a full-dinner-pail campaign. Not until the last week or so, when it could make no difference, did he talk about issues, and then for the most part in generalities.

Yet, shortly after the new Congress met in January, with an overwhelmingly Democratic majority, Roosevelt sent up his plan to remake the Supreme Court, a plan that must surely have been in his mind long before the November election. A surprise and shock to public and party, it was very nearly the end of Roosevelt's influence in domestic policy.

While it is unlikely that Dewey has such a bombshell in the making, he is too positive and farseeing not to have his own program in readiness long before January. And in the light of the current campaign that program may seem strange and alien.

School Buses

In his letter of October 11 Theodore Humes criticized Holton R. Small's letter of October 5 because Mr. Small was opposed to using public money for private affairs. I wish to go on record as favoring what Mr. Small says in regard to not furnishing bus service to take Catholics to their private schools.

If Catholics, Jews, Negroes, Indians, or anyone else who uses the service, are not satisfied with our laws, and will not accept our favors, they ought to be thankful that our laws permit them to have their own institutions of learning, even if they pay all of their expenses.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

It's Up To Dewey

Louisville

THE SITUATION in Kentucky is the apparent exception that proves the rule of the Republicans' situation on the eve of victory. Here Republican Senator John Sherman Cooper seems extremely likely to defeat his Democratic opponent, Representative Virgil Chapman. But President Harry S. Truman will probably carry Kentucky over Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

There are, as usual, special local features in the Kentucky situation. Senator Cooper is making an effective down-to-earth appeal to the Kentucky tobacco growers. He points out that they already have Senator Alben W. Barkley to help them with the Democrats and suggests they had better keep a Republican on the payroll, too, to represent them with the new Administration. Cooper is also assisted by the character of his opponent, Chapman, who is an unusually unappetizing, dilapidated, old-fashioned Southern reactionary. Equally, Truman is helped here by the great home State popularity of his running mate, Barkley.

YET SENATOR Cooper's real major asset is his reputation as a genuinely progressive Republican, not tarred with the Eightieth Congress brush. This is why Cooper, alone among his fellow Senators, has more strength than Governor Dewey. The Kentucky situation is the exact reverse of that in most of the Midwestern States, where Hoover era Republicans are frankly counting on Dewey's coattails to carry them into the Senate. This correspondent has found that to be the pattern in Iowa, Minnesota and Illinois. Reports from West Virginia and Wyoming plainly suggest that in these States also, the Dewey coattails are the chief reliance of the obstinately backward-looking Republican Senators, Chapman Revercomb and Edward V. Robertson.

Confident prediction is impossible where the size of the total vote, the extent of ticket-splitting in each State, the turn-out for Henry A. Wallace and other unknown quantities are going to be so important. Yet, this correspondent's inquiries have led to the view that the Republicans will not lose the Senate after all. Their candidates are in danger in a good many States. But the Democrats are also in danger in one or two, like New Mexico and Montana. And it is hard to believe that an electoral sweep for Dewey can be combined with the loss of one of the Houses of Congress.

None the less, the pattern set forth above clearly means that the appearance of Republican victory all along the line may be dangerously misleading. Governor Dewey himself does not seem as yet to have much personal appeal to the electorate. His strength is, simply, that he is regarded as competent and energetic, whereas President Truman is generally considered incompetent and inadequate. As one farm housewife put it, "Truman seems to be a good man, but when you think a man would make a thriftless farmer, you can't vote for him for President."

COMPETENT and energetic leadership is what the electorate very naturally wants in this troubled time. On the other hand, the electorate conspicuously does not want the shop-worn Harding-Coolidge-Hoover era brand of Republicanism so persistently peddled by the Eightieth Congress. The Republican Senatorial candidates who represent this brand of Republicanism are obviously weak. Cooper, the sole modern-minded Republican Senator up for re-election, is equally obviously strong. The inference is clear.

Nor is the sole proof that the situation in the country is not what some Republicans gloatingly suppose. Everywhere, the itinerant inquirer hears two points of speculation. If some such man as Justice William O. Douglas had got the nod instead of Truman in 1944, it is said that the Democrats would probably now be winning again, despite their 16 years in office. And if in Philadelphia the Republicans had chosen an Eightieth Congress type of candidate instead of Dewey, it is also said, with still greater positiveness, that even Truman would now be ahead.

THE VISIBLE deterioration of the Wallace movement and the attempts of the Northern Democratic organizations to put their houses in order are other developments which the victorious Republicans should note with care. Sum up the whole picture and a central fact emerges. All now depends on Governor Dewey. If he gives a boldly progressive, clear-sighted administration, he will gain for his party the fundamental, permanent support it presently lacks. But if he weakly permits the congressional Republicans to indulge in a carnival of reaction, he will be lost, and his party will be lost with him.

Such is the first conclusion of a traveling correspondent. The second may also be noted. Any voyager west of the Alleghenies who is not deeply stirred by the magnificent vitality and superb richness of the American Central States must have the sensibilities of a stockfish.

Venetian Blind Fire Damage Set at $40,000

Fire of undetermined origin early yesterday destroyed a converted barn near Colesville, Md., in which venetian blinds were manufactured. Damage was estimated at $40,000.

Firemen from Silver Spring, Hillandale and Sandy Spring said their efforts to control the flames were hampered by a quantity of highly inflammable paint and varnish on the premises.

A tenant house adjacent to the structure was saved. Owner E. Buckley Hancock discovered the blaze when he returned home shortly after midnight, firemen said.

Western Union Offers New Credit Service

The Western Union Telegraph Co. today announced a new credit plan which permits persons away from home to charge telegrams, cables or errand service to their home accounts.

The telegraph company will issue credit cards which may be used by business or other travelers when wiring from hotels, airports, railroad stations, trains or any other other telegraph offices in the United States.

In announcing the innovation, A. K. Mitchell, superintendent of the Western Union for the Washington metropolitan area, said it was designed primarily for business travelers, but will be found convenient by anyone away from home.

If a credit card holder finds it more convenient to dictate a telegram from a phone to a Western Union office, he may charge it to his home account by merely reading off a code number which appears on the credit card. The number identifies the patron for billing.

Scientist Warns: Beware of Gas Dubbed 'Aran'

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP).—Beware of the north wind if you are criminal type "C"—it might compel you to murder.

But if you are unstable type "W," southern breezes might lead you to commit suicide.

This theory was advanced today by Dr. Manfred Curry of Boston, a researcher in aerodynamics and bioclimatics.

The culprit in his view is a gas in the atmosphere called Aran, an ozone-like substance. When the wind is from the north, concentrations of Aran are high. South winds are low in the substance

Type "W" persons are usually ruddy faced individuals who like cold winds, cold baths, and rich foods. Dr. Curry says they fear a closed telephone booth where Aran is lacking.

Type "C" persons enjoy mild climate and usually are pale. They are capable, ambitious and uncompromising. An overdos eof Aran can send them off in fits of rage.

Dr. Curry's hypothesis was published in the Northwestern University Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology. While it is open to some skepticism, the editors said, it is based on "certain plausible assumptions and facts."

Group to Ask Rehearing on CTC Fare Hike

The Washington Committee for Consumer Protection last night voted to petition the Public Utilities Commission for a rehearing on Capital Transit fare increases.

Mrs. Edna Schubert, acting chairman, said the committee left the time for filing the petition up to its attorney, Harry R. Booth.

The PUC recently authorzied Capital Transit increases from 10 to 13 cents cash, with a three-token price of 35 cents. Price of weekly passes was raised from $1.50 to $1.75. The increases were ordered effective October 31.

Mrs. Schubert said the consumer committee also voted to continue its efforts to get President Truman to remove PUC members and Peopel's Counsel John O'Day on ground of "prejudice in favor of utilities."

She said the President thus far had not responded to the committee's removal appeal.

The committee met last night at 718 5th st. nw.

4 Young Lovers, Friend Eat Poison Candy, Die in Pact

New Delhi, India, Oct. 14 (AP). Four teen-age boys and girls committed suicide with poisoned candy yesterday because their parents, of different castes, forbade their marriage, a Lucknow newspaper said today.

The newspaper, the National Herald, said a third boy, a mutual friend of the two couples, also died in the love pact.

The dispatch said: Two Hindu sisters, daughters of a lawyer, two male students and the third boy left their homes in Hamirpur city secretly at midnight Tuesday when their parents, of different castes, refused them permission to marry.

They celebrated on the banks of the sacred Jumna River their "reunion in Heaven" and then distributed poisoned sweets among themselves.

The five bodies were buried side by side by the weeping parents. Hindus bury bodies of unmarried persons but cremate others.

Danny Kaye Heads U. S. Teams for Royal Show

London, Oct. 14 (AP).—Danny Kaye, Hollywood comedian who played in London last winter, will top six American acts in a command performance at the annual Royal Variety Show, November 1.

Placement on the bill is regarded in Britain as the highest honor that can be paid in the profession. Approval of King George VI is required for each act.

The other American acts are George and Bert Bernard, imitators; the Colstons, comedy dance team; Jayne and Adam di Gatanos, ballroom dancers; the Nicholas Brothers, Negro tap dancers, and Buster Shaver, with Olive, George and Richard, midget singers and dancers.

Farley Sailing Today

London, Oct. 14 (AP).—James A. Farley, former United States Postmaster General, said today he is sailing for America Friday on the liner America, concluding a tour of Europe.

Reds Pictured As Whittling Basic Faith

Fundamental faith, more than the vast church organizations which foster it, is the chief target of Communistic suppression of religion in countries behind the Iron Curtain.

This is the view of a 35-year-old Swiss-American newspaperman who recently returned to America after 2½ years of reporting religious conflict in eastern Europe.

Speaking before the annual membership meeting of the Washington Conference of Christians and Jews, New England-born and Harvard-educated Ernest Zaugg said the Communist antireligion crusade is "not one of violent persecution."

Slow Whittling Away

"Rather, it is one of gradual suppression and restriction of larger church groups by attacks on their fundamental beliefs—a slow whittling away of church institutions and church influence."

To achieve this end, said Zaugg, now a correspondent for Religious News Service, the Moscow-directed governments of satellite countries concentrate heavily on youth groups and schools.

In eastern Germany, for example, he found "books of instruction" being widely circulated to indoctrinate post-Hitler youth in the principles of communism. He quoted from one:

"The poison of the superstition of religion must be eliminated from the minds of the people by gradual, patient instruction, rather than by violence and bureaucratic methods."

Which is not to say, he added, that clergymen of the more dominant faiths—generally the Catholic Church — are not "arrested on vague suspicion and put in jail."

Is True in Poland

This Zaugg found to be particularly true in Poland, where the struggle "seemed most intense." He also saw instances of it in Hungary and other countries in the Red orbit.

Before his talk, the conference, reporting a membership of 1400, elected the following slate of officers for the Washington area:

Norris C. Bakke, Joseph D. Kaufman and Harry J. Kirk, co-chairmen; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, secretary; Milton W. King, treasurer, and Aaron Goldman, Alfred A. McGarraghy and Paul Matthews, membership cochairmen.

Bride-to-Be Still In Germany, Airlines Report

By The Associated Press

Pan American Airways officials said yesterday Miss Marianne Kuhn, German bride-to-be reported apparently lost here since Saturday, is still in Germany.

She was not allowed to board a plane at Frankfurt as scheduled, because American consular authorities there had not issued her a visa.

Miss Kuhn, 27, was to have arrived in Des Moines, Iowa, Saturday night, where she was to be met by Max Lembke, 31, of Marshalltown, Iowa, her intended husband.

However, American Airlines carried Miss Kuhn's name on its passenger list for a flight from New York to Washington Saturday. Airline officials conceded an error probably had been made in checking the passenger list.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., Sees Americans Unpopular Abroad

Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., world traveler and journalist, last night said he found the Americans unpopular in Europe and the Marshall Plan apparently inefficient.

Vanderbilt, who pointed out that the Dutch had a good vegetable crop, declared, "They needed cows and fertilizer. We didn't need vegetables and they didn't need vegetables, but Uncle Sam was sending them boatload after boatload of vegetables—and that is the story of the Marshall Plan all over Europe."

Vanderbilt, who described himself as "a reporter, not an economist," spoke at the opening meeting of the third annual Silver Spring Town Hall in the Silver Spring (Md.) Armory. About 500 persons attended.

The Town Hall is sponsored by the Rotary Club for the benefit of its revolving student loan fund.

Vanderbilt said the only people he found who like the Americans are the Swiss.

"Most everybody in Europe said the Marshall Plan is a great aid to the American economy," he said. "No one there appreciates what we are doing for them."

Speaking of the possibility of another war, Vanderbilt said he found no one in Europe willing to fight yet. "If we go it with the Soviets, we are going to have to go it alone."

Vanderbilt said he had gone to Europe "an internationalist" and had come home "almost an isolationist, certainly a nationalist."

He said that "unless the United Nations has a code defining aggression and an international police force to back it up, the United Nations remains a scrap of paper, and we ought to get out of Europe."

Vanderbilt was introduced by John Magnus, a member of the Town Hall committee, who served as moderator for a question period at the end.

The second in a series of four programs will be presented November 4 with Graham Young, explorer and film director, showing motion pictures of Africa.

Vienna, Austria, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Ninety heavy Russian tanks have arrived from Hungary to join 20,000 Soviet Army troops in maneuvers northwest of Vienna, reliable sources reported tonight.

Bishop Lauds Eisenhower On Education

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—A Methodist bishop said tonight "the college is the place where students must learn to face the ideas which threaten our democratic and community life.

Bishop James C. Baker fo Los Angeles told the Virginia Methodist Conference that "one of the great things of General Eisenhower's address on assuming the presidency of Columbia University was his insistence that there must be free and open study not only of decmocracy but of those movements and ideas which threaten democracy.

"There is a strange blindness on the part of many men on this point," said Bishop Baker, who is president of the Council of Methodist Bishops and chairman of the division of educational institutions of the Methodist Board of Education.

"They think they should draw down an iron curtain against subversive ideas instead of letting the light of free discussion play through them," he said.

At today's business meeting of the annual conference, district superintendents reported a total gain in the past year of 7794 new church members by professions of faith and a net gain of 7751 in Sunday school memberships. Transfers totaled 8762.

The conference voted to provide a full time secretary for its town and country commission but defeated a proposal to employ a full time secretary for church extension work.

Luther W. Wells of Richmond was reelected conference lay leader. Others reelected were John H. Redd of Richmond, vice chairman; Bruce Slaven of Harrisonburg, secretary and John C. Simpson of Danville, treasurer.

District superintendents recommended retirement for nine ministers. The nine, with their districts and charges are:

The Revs. George W. H. Taylor, Norfolk, Ferebee-Halstead Memorial; A. L. Stevenson, Charlottesville, who had been on leave; J. L. Clarke, Charlottesville, South Amherst; W. A. Clark, Lynchburg, Montvale Circuit; Allen J. Carter, Rappahannock, last charge Montrose, now in Red Cross work; R. J. Brooks, supply pastor, Richmond, Spotsylvania; N. A. Maryland PTA Ponders World Government

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP). — The Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers turned its attention today to world problems.

In keeping with the three-day convention theme, "Building a Better World," the 400 delegates heard Dr. Ralph McDonald and sat in on a panal discussion of "How to Live Within a Family of Nations."

Dr. McDonald is a member of the World Citizenship Committee and an officer of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers and the National Education Association.

He said the convention's theme is "not only visionary but as practical as life itself" since every human achievement started as somebody's dream.

Mrs. Robert G. Doty, of Cumberland, presided at the sessions. She said the Maryland Congress has almost doubled its membership since end of the war. The membership now totals 50,645 in 310 locals, Mrs. Doty said.

Dr. McDonald told the delegates:

Washington Gas Light Co. stockholders snapped up 86 per cent of the 102,000-share offering of additional common stock, according to Robert C. Owers, vice president and treasurer.

Owers

Proceeds, he reported, will amount to $2,066,525 after deducting underwriters' commissions and other expenses. The money will be used to provide for part of the gas company's construction program and to repay outstanding bank loans. The company estimates that expenditures for 1948 construction will total about $6,500,000. Earlier this year, the firm sold 85,000 shares of common stock.

Underwriters reported yesterday afternoon that 7141 shares of the new common stock will be placed on public sale at 23⅜. This is the balance remaining of the unsubscribed 13,654 shares after the underwriters fulfined commitments in connection with the buying and selling of "rights." The warrants expired Wednesday at 3 p. m.

NEW PHONES: Don't expect them for several more years, but the Bell Telephone Laboratories are working on a new type of telephone set. It will be lighter and reproduce talk better. It will have a device so the phone subscriber can control the loudness of the bell. Numbers and letters on the dial will be relocated and placed on one side so they can be seen better at an angle.

SALES LEADERS: Oil, automobiles, steel and meat led the Nation in net sales for the second quarter of 1948. The SEC disclosed this yesterday in a survey which showed sales are still increasing but the pace is tapering off. Aggregate sales of 1276 corporations was $27,608,519,000 during the second quarter. This was an increase of 13.8 per cent over the same 1947 period. But it is only 1.5 per cent higher than the $27,204,732,000 net sales for the first quarter this year. By comparison, net sales in the second 1947 period jumped nearly 9 per cent over the first quarter. Industries with the highest net sales for the second 1948 quarter were: Oil refining, $3,682,586,000; automobiles, $1,946,579,000; steel producers with blast furnaces, $1,667,845,000, and meat packing, $1,510,234,000.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Decentralization Of U. S. Agencies Under Discussion

Half a dozen men are meeting every week or so to discuss a problem that strikes home in more ways than one with Federal workers. It's possible decentralization of some Federal agencies and activities here—the physical moving of some bureaus and their employes outside of this city.

The chairman of the group is an official of the National Security Resources Board which is required by law to make the study. Invited to attend the sessions are representatives from the Budget Bureau, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Munitions Board and the Federal Works Agency.

You can discard all the rumors and reports on what will be the outcome of their studies. Conflicting plans have been discussed but no decisions have been made. When the study group agrees on a proposal it must follow this course:

Be approved by the seven cabinet member National Security Resources Board, which hasn't met in weeks, which will in turn, presumably, take it to the President, and the President, if he approves, would have to recommend it to Congress in order to get funds to carry it out. In other words, any large-scale decentralization plan is months away. Also, the Hoover Commission is sure to have something to say on the subject and its suggestion might conflict with the NSRB plan.

However, it's no secret that some people in the military agencies here believe the NSRB is handling the problem too leisurely in this period of international tension. These people are reported to be at work on proposals that would move a substantial number of people and agencies outside of this city as a defense measure. The drastic plans, it's said, won't even have the support of top military officials.

A score of proposals have been discussed by the NSRB group. Among them are: (1) that some of the Federal agencies here be relocated in Maryland and Virginia in a radius of 50 miles; that they be relocated in such a way that no series of enemy bombs could knock them out; (2) that agencies with from 30,000 to 40,000 employes be moved to other cities; (3) that a system of area Government centers be built—centers that could operate if Washington is knocked out, and finally, that no further decentralization is necessary.

It's obvious that any major transfer plan would take months and even years to complete since the job of providing offices and homes elsewhere would be time-consuming. But around the first of next year you'll be hearing a lot about decentralization.

VA: Meantime, the Veterans' Administration is faced with the opposite problem—to recentralize and to abandon much of the decentralization policy of General Bradley, the former administrator.

The Congress ordered Administrator Carl R. Gray to make a study of the branch office structure set up by Bradley and to report back to it early in January. It's clear that the Congress hopes the branch offices will be abolished since it provided money for only a few more months of operation.

Officially, Mr. Gray hasn't made up his mind on the problem and he says he won't until after he completes his inspection trip late this year. Other sources say that the administrator is of the opinion that the branch offices can be either merged or wiped out altogether and the functions transferred to other offices.

NOTES: You can expect the Civil Service Commission to appoint several additional members to its fair employment board—if it can persaude good people to take the thankless jobs . . . VA has suspended on charges of disloyalty a 35-year-old veteran who lost both legs when a German shell exploded near him. The employe is James Kutcher of Newark, N. J. He plans an appeal to the Civil Service loyalty review board . . . The Office of the Quartermaster General needs Grade 3 and 4 stenos, Grade 3 typists, and Grade 2 tabulating machine operators. Call Republic 6700, Extension 71767 for details.

POSTOFFICE: The business of this department is booming at a record rate. Every day is an old-time Christmas rush for the half a million postal employes.

This should give you a good idea of its tremendous business—last month the department handled more parcel post packages than it did during last December when the Xmas business was at a new peak. And an even larger volume of mail must be handled this month.

What the Christmas season will bring this year is viewed with mixed feelings by postal officials. A new business record is sure to be set, but fears have been expressed that the business may be in such volume that it will overload and break down some units in the department which lack the facilities to take care of the present volume at top efficiency.

The big rush of work is the real reason why the department is hiring several thousand additional employes each month and why nearly every big postoffice is crying for more help. The increase definitely has nothing to do with politics as some suspicious people seem to believe. Business has increased about 300 per cent and the number of postoffice employes hasn't even doub[illegible]

Alexandria Draft Chief Says Youths Fail to Sign

'Regard It as Joke,' Weiners Declares, Giving Warning on 'Deliberate' Action

The chairman of the Alexandria (Va.) Selective Service Board charged last night that a number of Alexandria youths of draft age have deliberately neglected to register.

Edward J. Weiners, chairman of Local Board No. 10, said the number of men between 18 and 26 who signed up in the September registration, totaling about 3300, "does not meet the calculated number based on the present population."

"It is known that some men have neglected to register," he declared, "not through ignorance, but deliberately. They regard it as a joke."

Weiners warned that those who were required to register and who have not done so "are subject to penalties prescribed for delinquents in the Selective Service law. All men, between the ages of 18 and 26 are required to register, regardless of marital status or previous military service."

The Alexandria draft chief said the board would consider an extention of time for registrants until next Wednesday. He declined to say what steps would be taken after that time against any delinquents.

In the District, 26 men have been selected as acceptable under the November induction quota of 55 men, Deputy Selective Service Director Frank D. Norton announced.

A meeting for all recently appointed physicians who will act in an advisory capacity for the local boards in the District will be held tonight at the District Medical Society Building, 1718 M st. nw., it was announced.

Film on Sex Education Is Approved

Two school officials and an officer of the District Health Department yesterday reviewed the sex education film "Human Growth" and found it acceptable for showing to school children.

The film was run off for local educators, physicians, psychiatrists and social workers by the District Social Hygiene Society during a meeting of the society at the South Agriculture Department Building.

Dr. James N. Gannon, physician member of the Board of Education, said the film was "excellent" and declared that he would have no objection to having it shown to District school children.

At present showing of the film, prepared under direction of the University of Oregon, is limited to Parent-Teacher Associations. Before it can be shown to school children it must be approved by the Board of Education.

"I like the idea of having the film shown to parents to help them explain sex to their children," Dr. Gannon said.

Birch E. Bay, director of health and physical education for the white schools, said he will recommend the film be considered as part of the school health instruction program.

Dr. S. Ross Taggart, chief of the bureau of venereal disease for the Health Department, said the film "presents in an understanding way human development and growth."

The film will be shown twice today before members of the Noyes School P-TA at 2:30 and 3 p. m. at the school, 10th and Franklin sts. ne.

Executive Secretary Ray H. Everett of the Social Hygiene Society told the meeting that Washington should "be preparing for action on the numerous social hygiene hazards" that will arise with another national emergency.

Morse to Be Speaker

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Ore.), will speak on civil rights before the American Council on Human Rights at a dinner at 6:30 tonight at the Willard Hotel's Congressional Room.

TALL DIANA—Post Reporter Elsie Carper examines the plaster statue of "Diana Hunting," cast from the original in the Louvre, now reposing in the basement of the Corcoran Gallery of Art. Gallery officials would like to give it and other casts of famed Greek, Roman and Renaissance figures to local schools

DEMOSTHENES AND FRIENDS—John P. Leeper is no stranger in the midst of this distinguished company. Leeper, keeper of the W. A. As famed a group of ancient gods, goddesses and heroes as ever capered on Mount Olympus are collecting dust in the dark subbasement of the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

Stacked in corners beneath a maze of furnace pipes are the "Discus Thrower," "Diana," "Hermes," "Dionysus," "Adonis" and "Apollo" among others.

"The Bound Slave" by Michelangelo rests in two sections on the cement floor. The Greek athlete, "Apoxymenos," stands facing the wall.

Three headless goddesses from the east pediment of the Parthenon are hidden behind a relatively modern hero, "Voltaire," by Houdon.

In another group are the armless "Venus of Milo," the "Dying Slave," the "Dying Gladiator," and the "Three Graces of Chantier."

Miscellaneous Roman busts, feet, arms and hands lie scattered on the floor.

Corcoran, in the midst of housecleaning, would like to give away to local schools these plaster models of Greek, Roman and Renaissance sculpture.

Until two years ago they filled the colonnaded hall on the main floor of the gallery and lined the wide marble stairway leading to the second floor.

Corcoran Director Hermann W. Williams had them taken down to make room for the gallery's collection of original American pieces. Now Williams would like the basement for storing more valuable works.

Many of the plaster casts are of heroic size. A copy of "Winged Victory" stands 10 feet and "Diana Hunting," cast from the original in the Louvre, is equally as tall.

Then there are smaller works—a three foot high copy of the "Winged Victory" but minus a wing, in addition to head and small figures by Michelangelo from the tomb of Lorenzo d'Medici.

Although Corcoran made the offer to the schools several months ago only Shaw Junior High School has been by to make a selection.

Miss Alma Thomas, art teacher at the school, took away seven pieces including a Bacchus and Julius Caesar.

Director Williams said the pieces are "invaluable" for classes in drawing and if shown in school will acquaint students with classical works.

Corcoran, he said, is not getting rid of all of its casts. Some will remain for exhibition purposes and others saved for the Corcoran Art School.

Justice Dept. Protest Halts D. C. Contract

Antitrust Complaint Based on Friede's Specifications Taken From Firm's Catalogue

A Justice Department protest yesterday halted District government award of a contract for interoffice communicating equipment, based on technical specifications drafted by Herbert A. Friede, District communications superintendent.

Friede reported to Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, that he had written the text of the requirements for the equipment, drawing upon a commercial catalogue for some portions. The equipment was for the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

Friede made the report to General Young, in the presence of the other District Commissioners, John Russell Young and Guy Mason, and of newspaper reporters, in the office of John Russell Young.

John Russell Young made public a letter he had received from Herbert A. Bergson, Assistant Attorney General, dated October 6. It said that the anti-trust division of the Justice Department had received a complaint that the District's invitations to bid on the inter-communicatnig equipment contained a specification "which has the effect of eliminating all competition and confining to a single company the manufacturers who can meet the specification."

"It is charged that these specifications consist substantially of the catalogue description of Teletalk model 512 TASL, a product of the Webster Electric Co."

That company, one of 16 listed as having been invited to bid, did not actually bid. According to Poland M. Brennan, bids were received from three companies, ranging in price from around $900 to around $1800.

The high bidder was Graybar Electric Co., Inc., 60 Florida ave. ne., Washington distributor for products of the Webster Co. Friede told General Young it was from the Graybar catalogue that he had drawn language for the proposed contract specifications. Two other companies submitted bids, the Television Engineering Co., 1341 L st. nw., and the Kenyon Radio Supply Co., 2214 14th st. nw.

The Commissioners made public an official file of papers including bids and other documents. One was an unsigned letter, prepared by Friede for the signature of Walter E. Kern, District electrical engineer, recommending that the Television Co. and Kenyon Co. bids be disregarded since the type of qeuipment they offered did not meet the specifications, and recommending award of the contract to Graybar.

This was superseded by a letter signed by Friede and dated Tuesday, saying that in accordance with instructions of the Assistant Engineer Commissioner, it was recommended that all the bids be rejected.

John Russell Young told reporters that from a conference with Gordon Grant, of the anti-trust division, he had gathered that the Justice Department "does not feel there has been any deliberate attempt to eliminate competition."

Friede has been under fire in the District Building previously and the commissioners have been divided on the question of his remaining in municipal government office.

In April this year Commissioner John Russell Young split with the two Commissioners by calling for Friede's dismissal. A letter to House District Chairman Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.), at that time outlined Young's doubts as to whether the District had enjoyed the benefits of competitive bidding in the purchase of fire alarm equipment when Friede was in charge of such purchases.

Friede had been under attack for allegedly helping the Gamewell Co. to obtain contracts for supplying fire alarm equipment to the District. The company and five of its officials were fined $33,250 in Boston Federal District Court last March on monopoly and restraint-of-trade charges.

The two other Commissioners, General Young and Mason, told Dirksen in April they favored keeping Friede in his present office, and had found "no hint or suggestion that (he) received any money, gifts or other material consideration from the Gamewell Co."

Purchasing Officer Brennan told reporters Friede had drawn the specifications. Reporters then heard Friede tell General Young he had drawn the specifications.

In a later interview he denied having placed in the specifications this opening paragraph on the invitation to bid:

"Twelve stations, intercommunicating, complete in accordance with the following specifications: Type 512 TASL—3—6 as shown in the Webster Electric Co. catalog, Racine, Wis., or equal (see par. 8, reverse side)."

The reference to paragraph 8 was to language making clear that mention of the manufacturer, or the brand, was not intended to exclude other kinds, but only to "indicate the character of article desired."

Friede said he had prepared his rough draft of the functional requirements from conferences with officials of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic. These officials said they did not have any particular brand of equipment in mind. Friede said later the specifications were edited finally by the purchasing department.

Friede said the final editing was done by W. T. Teepe in the purchasing department. He said that was when the paragraph naming the Webster product went into the specifications.

Teepe said, "No, sir, that paragraph was put in by him (Friede)."

Doctor Saves Man's Life at Crash Scene

Prompt first aid by a Washington physician was credited yesterday with saving the life of a 36-year-old man whose jugular vein was severed in an automobile accident.

Dr. Stubbs

Lawrence Sigler, of 527 Roxboro pl. nw., is in satisfactory condition at Emergency Hospital, where he was taken by Dr. Donald Stubbs, 305 Mansion dr., Alexandria, who stemmed the flow of blood with makeshift handkerchief bandages.

Three other persons were less seriously injured in the car, which overturned Tuesday night on a temporary wooden bridge over the Boundary Channel on Lee blvd., just beyond Lincoln Memorial Bridge.

Dr. Stubbs was driving along Lee blvd. with his wife at about 10:30 p. m. when they came upon the wrecked car.

Noticing that Sigler was bleeding profusely as he lay near the car, Dr. Stubbs placed two handkerchiefs in his neck wound and pulled the cut tissue over them. He then wrapped the victim's coat sleeve around the neck to form a tight bandage.

In attempting to apply sufficient pressure to stop the bleeding without cutting off breathing Dr. Stubbs placed his thumb over a vein and held the bandage in place. He then rushed the victim to a hospital in the car of a passing motorist.

Miss Florence Merriam, 35, of 2222 I st. nw., an employe of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway here, suffered cuts and bruises in the accident and was taken to Emergency in the car with Sigler.

Other passengers injured, who were treated at George Washington University Hospital and released, were Raymond J. Sabo, 34, of 11 W. Inverness dr., Chevy Chase, Md., and Joseph Tishler, 48, 1365 Kennedy st. nw.

2 New Area Polio Cases Are Reported

Two new Washington area polio cases were reported yesterday by the District Health Department.

They were a 7-year-old Washington boy from the 800 block of Delafield pl. nw., admitted to Children's Hospital Wednesday, and a 31-year-old woman, resident of Alexandria, Va., admitted to Gallinger Wednesday.

The new cases boosted this year's area polio total to 210. Of these, 111 have been from the District, and 99 from nearby Virginia and Maryland. Last year's total at this time was 19 District cases, and 28 from near by.

Kreisler Center of Attention As Symphony Season Opens

By Paul Hume

Fritz Kreisler was the center of attention last night as the National Symphony Orchestra opened its eighteenth season in Constitution Hall.

The celebrated violinist was greeted by a large audience, many of whom were present simply because he was the soloist. Audience and orchestra alike rose to their feet as the great artist entered. Their applause was only a herald of the ovation which followed Kreisler's playing of Mendelssohn's familiar concerto.

More than a half dozen times after the concerto the violinist returned to the stage, in response to the honestly affectionate thanks of the listeners. His playing was warm, tender, and phrased with true elegance. Kreisler is still, at 73, a shining idol to thousands who have loved him for decades.

Hans Kindler, returning to the scene of many personal triumphs, conducted a Purcell suite, the first symphony of Sibelius, a new tone poem of Riisager, and Bartok's Romanian Dances. The orchestral playing was frequently ragged, particularly in the strings. Intonation was hazardous throughout the evening, especially in the symphony.

One expects a certain roughness at opening concerts. But the orchester had several rehearsals and played two public concerts before last night's program. The difficulties last evening were usually those of sloppy attacks and rhythmic inaccuracies—factors which must be improved not only by the players but by a clearer beat from the conductor.

The American premiere of Knadige Riisager's tone poem, Quarrtsiluni, exhibited a vapid score. It was reminiscent of the horrible music written for the closing of "Duel in the Sun." Why it was played, is a mystery.

Mysterious also is Kindler's custom of programming symphonies of Sibelius and then cutting them at will. If these overpopular works are worth playing, why not play them as written? The sections excised last night are fully as worthy as those that were heard. We doubt that Sibelius would care to have his music played at all if he knew it was to be edited.

Only the Purcell suite provided real musical beauty, and that in spite of poor ensemble work. But such is the beauty of the music that it overrides many obstacles. The audience, apathetic to much that occurred, seemed as happy as we that Kreisler was present.

Coroner Holds Death Of Dorland Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy in the death Wednesday of Leslie A. Dorland, 53, of 2500 Ives st. S., Arlington.

Mr. Dorland died at Emergency Hospital nearly six days after he was found wounded in the head and abdomen in his parked car in the 1300 block of Maine ave. sw. He was in charge of the veal and lamb department of Armour & Co., 501 12th st. sw.

Arlington's Bonds Quickly Snapped Up

Arlington yesterday sold $2,526,000 worth of county and school bonds. Eight financial houses had bid on the issues.

A $1,776,000 bond issue for elementary school construction was bought by the Chase National Bank of New York on its bid of 2½ per cent interest plus an $8507 premium.

The $750,000 bond issue to build an Arlington incinerator went to Estabrook & Co. of New York, on that firm's bid of 2.6 per cent interest plus a premium of $5250.

Barnard Joy, chairman of the School Board, described the bid on the school bond as "very favorable," and said it indicated "the very sound financial status of Arlington."

He pointed out that the $4,750,000 bond issue sought by the board at the polls November 1 also was referred to in a prospectus to bond buyers. The favorable rate was obtained despite bidders' awareness of this possible added indebtedness, Joy said.

He called yesterday's bid "a fine indication that the larger amount we seek will sell favorably."

County officials explained that some of the county incinerator bonds are callable after a five-year period, thus accounting for the more favorable terms on the school bonds, which do not share that advantage.

The school bonds, approved by Arlington voters in May of 1947, will be used to replace the present Hume, Fairlington, Glencarlyn and Hoffman - Boston elementary schools and to build new schools in Dominion Hills and Little Falls rd., off Glebe rd.

Cleveland Seeks Parking Solution

Private Interests Fight City-Owned Car Lots

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 14.—This city, like Washington, is faced with a parking problem.

It is trying to alleviate the problem with city-owned city-operated parking facilities.

A two-level, $1,500,000 underground auto-park has been built near the city auditorium opposite City Hall and linked to the auditorium with a tunnel.

Charles T. McGavin, Washington's parking expert who is studying the attempts of other cities to solve their parking problem, saw the underground auto-park today and was told it has space for 200 cars on its lower level and 300 on its upper level.

The city charges 35 cents a day for parking there, and patronage runs at almost capacity the year round.

The city also operates a tract along Lake Erie as a free fringe lot.

This lot began for only a few hundred cars, but as demand increased more land was filled in and topped with asphalt until now the fringe lot accommodates about 1200 vehicles.

A special 6-cent fare—about half the regular fare—is afforded between the fringe lot and the downtown area a mile away on special shuttle buses.

The shuttle buses are operated by the city-owned Cleveland Transit System, using buses that would otherwise be idle during off-peak hours. The shuttle buses run at four-minute intervals.

Actually, according to Paul Hurd, commissioner of auditorium and stadium, Cleveland's venture into the parking business developed over a number of years.

Its first attempt, the operation of a 2000-car, open-air lot in the City Hall area, ended in 1934 when private parking interests obtained a court dcision against use of public funds for such purpose.

The present underground auto-park, when first built, also was challenged by private parking interests, who obtained a State Supreme Court ruling in 1936 limiting its use only in connection with events at the auditorium or city stadium, which is a few hundred yards away.

The auto-park was used by the Army Ordnance Department during World War II, and when the Army moved out Commissioner Hurd again opened it to the public, on the ground that existing private parking facilities in the city were inadequate.

The private parkers raised a howl. But, according to Hurd, they did not appeal this time to courts, and the city has continued to keep the underground facilities open.

When there's a show at the auditorium or stadium, parking, however, is restricted to auditorium or stadium use.

McGavin, the Washington expert, was told today that the staff of Cleveland Planning Director John T. Howard is now making comprehensive survey of traffic and parking in the city.

According to Commissioner Hurd, one result expected from the survey is the start of plans for more fringe lots to catch traffic coming into the downtown area from directions not convenient to the present fringe lot.

Being talked about—but thus far given little encouragement by city officials—is a proposal to build a three-story, 2000-car underground garage beneath the city mall.

City officials, according to Hurd, have held off on this, feeling the city has much city-owned vacant land and the under-the-mall structure would prove too costly.

Cleveland, unlike Baltimore and Philadelphia, has meters throughout the downtown area, ranging in rates from 1 cent for 15 minutes to 5 cents for an hour. The trend now is toward elimination of the meters, however, and the prohibition of parking as a means of speeding traffic, Planning Director Howard reported.

The private parking lots here are unlicensed, although a $1 permanent registration fee is required. In addition, a city ordinance setting standards for signs, drainage and grading is enforced, although no reference is made to fees.

The latter aroused the ire of World Series visitors, who found that fees suddenly zoomed in the stadium vicinity to $3 and $5 heights.

McGavin, who has been checking the private lots personally, reported that rates are comparable with Washington's for the most part, ranging from 25 to 75 cents for all-day parkers. Several lots are on the sites of razed buildings and offer parking facilities in the structures' basements as well as on the ground.

McGavin also inspected several department store parking facilities, including the May Co.'s four-floor, 280-car garage. A company shuttle bus carries shoppers to the store four blocks away. Parking is free for customers.

One local official who is not worried about decentralization of the shopping district, Washington's woe, is County Assessor John A. Zangerle. He told this reporter that Cleveland's business center is not "devitalizing" and he feels it will gain as auto use is curtailed in favor of more convenient public transportation.

"People don't want to pay parking fees and lose time looking for parking space and then walking to the stores. They will use the streetcar and bus instead," he predicted.

3 Fines for Gaming In Md. Total $2000

Three men were fined a total of $2000 in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday as the result of a raid by Prince Georges County police on a Brentwood, Md., house September 28.

Milton Belzer, 35, and Albert Tavan, 42, both of 1424 N st. nw., were fined $700 apiece by Trial Magistrate Arthur P. Owens on charges of operating and promoting a lottery and bookmaking. William C. Dunn, 40, occupant of the house at 3801 39th st., Brentwood, paid $600 after conviction of permitting operating of a lottery and permitting bookmaking. All three pleaded guilty.

Judge Owens said he would not impose a jail sentence since "it would cost the taxpayers to board you." But he warned the three defendants: "You'll be picked up again." The trio smiled at this remark and the judge gave an answering chuckle.

The arrests were made by a squad of police led by Sergt. Edwin R. Thompson. A quantity of gambling paraphernalia was brought to the courtroom.

Kiwanis Club Elects

Charles M. Marsteller, of the Suburban National Bank, has been elected president of the Kiwanis Club of Silver Spring. He succeeds Jesse B. Nicholson, park and planning commission official.

Other new officers: Edward V. Fineran, vice president; Joseph Saunderson, jr., treasurer; Richard T. Kreuzburg, Loren L. Murray, Thomas G. Owen, Victor J. Richter, Dr. Peter W. Lombard, Aubrey L. Thomas and Royal G. Sherburne, members of the board of directors.

Fire Damages Trailer

Mrs. John Mayhugh of Temple Trailer Village, Fairfax County, escaped injury last night when fire damaged the interior of her trailer.

Chief C. J. Guckert of the Penn Dawn Fire Department, which responded to the alarm, said he was told Mrs. Mayhugh was pressing clothing she had just dry-cleaned when a short-circuited iron cord set off fumes.

Damage was estimated at $300.

Cabbie Held in Bond

A hacker, who rammed his cab into the foundation of his landlady's home was charged by Prince George County Police yesterday with malicious destruction of private property.

The cabbie is Paul E. Berger, 49. His landlady is Mrs. Virginia Payne of 8204 Edmonston rd., Berwyn, Md. Bond was set at $1500 by Justice of the Peace Harold R. Manning for a hearing to be called later.

Mrs. Payne was struck by flying bricks while she was stading three feet from the wall in a basement kitchen. Cement was tossed six feet into the room by the impact, police reported.

Cement Truck Explodes

A 90-pound flywheel which went berserk in the engine housing of a 20-ton, fully loaded cement truck yesterday caused an "explosion" which distributed parts of the vehicle over a 450 foot area.

The freak accident came as John M. Welch, 25, 1226 6th st. sw, driver for Maloney Concrete Co., drove the truck along East-West hwy. at Maple st.

With a loud report, the engine disintegrated. Welch was admitted to Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, with a possible broken ankle. Company officials estimated damage at $3000.

Man Sues Truck Firm in Crash: Asks $215,000

Two suits for a total of $215,000 were filed against Associated Transport, Inc., yesterday by Robert E. McCulloch of 511 Oneida pl. nw., as the result of an automobile accident.

McCulloch's wife, Gladys, died August 8 of injuries received a week earlier when the car McCulloch was driving collided with a trailer truck driven by an Associated Transport employe, Edgar James Rodes, on Route 1, 5 miles south of Alexandria, the suits charge.

McCulloch asks $15,000 for the death of his wife, and in his second suit asks $200,000 for injuries he received in the accident.

McCulloch's suit charges that his right kneecap was fractured and had to be removed, and that a nerve in his left arm was injured, with the result that he has lost the use of both his right leg and left arm and hand.

On the Town

The Casino Royal left the ranks of clubs presenting girlie shows when it pulled the Winnie Hoveler dancers out of the revue this week. The show is, or was opening night, led off by Harold Barry, a comic who's actually funny.

Harold has a story behind him that might interest you. He and his wife did a duo for nine years, or until that long-legged bird broke up their act by delivering a child. When their first baby arrived Harold figured that he ought to get into another business that was a little more stable than hoofing. He went out and bought up a cleaning establishment, branched out and found himself with 19 branches, a Greyhound bus that was fitted for 15,000 garments, and a couple of other trucks. In a short time luck delivered another child to the Barrys and topped it off by tripling their investment in the cleaning business.

Harold figured this was a good time to clear out of the business, so he sold and they bought a home in Westchester. After playing the role of a country squire for a time Harold felt the old itch for the spotlight and told his agent to start booking him. To quote Brother Barry, "There's still no business like show business."

Tex Morrisey & Co. (Tex doesn't make herself known till the end of the act) do a rather novel routine consisting of a stage mule that hops around from table to table with a bit of mute comedy and pantomime while her pert owner feeds the cue lines to it. It's a novel sort of thing and the audience seemed to enjoy the antics of the flop-eared animal.

The Terry Twins hold down the dancing end of the show, while Bob Preble M. C.'s and sings.

Chapter 3 of the Jody Miller story. Everyone who knows Jody or who has seen her appear in any of the various spots she's worked in town has been anxious to see what her next move would be. Her first step up the ladder was the winning of the Miss Washington contest. Jody returned to town from Atlantic City and considered a number of offers she'd received. Her next spot was the Capitol theater, where she appeared for two weeks. Another bit of time to consider her next step and she chose the Old New Orleans, where she opened last night. From where we sit it looks like a good move. She'll be seen by the people who can do her some good. Rita Dimitriou found it a good springboard for a six-month booking in New York and there's no reason why Jody can't do the same.

Next Tuesday the Crossroads reaches all the way out to Hollywood for its next bit of talent. He arrives here in the form of Maurice Rocco. Perhaps you remember him in a picture with Betty Hutton. Rocco stands on his feet (what else?) and dances while he plays the piano. If we remember the scene in the picture he does a very good job of it. He'll be here for a limited engagement.

One of the nicest fellows you could ever hope to find in show business is on the sick list for this week and a few weeks to come. He's Gene Ford, of the Capitol Theater, the fellow who's helped so many young hopefuls up the ladder. We talked to his wife Kay the other day and found that Gene's coming along fine but won't be back at his old stand for a few more weeks. Might be nice if some of you show people dropped him a card.

Tonight round about 10 on the clock the orchestra will strike it up for the annual Champagne and Orchids Dance at the Mayflower. About the only way you can get into it now is to hope for a canceled reservation. Florian Za Bach and his orchestra will make the music, while Artini and Consuelo make the entertainment.

The Interstate Society won't be holding its weekly dance at the Roosevelt tomorrow night. Dances will be started up next Saturday again. By the by, they're giving away two free trips to Bermuda. Gathering as much as we can from the release, your name is tossed into the pot every dance you attend. When they'll draw out the lucky one, we don't know.

Kansas Favored Over GW Tonight

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THAT'S JUST A WISP OF a football team, no kin to anything cyclonic, that is coming out of Kansas to play the big old, mean old George Washingtons tonight at Griffith Stadium, even though the Kansans are somehow a two-touchdown favorite.

POVICH

The biggest thing connected with the Kansas team is their advance publicity man, Mr. Don Pierce, he tells me. He used to play center for the Jayhawks before he played center with Brooklyn and the Cardinals in the pro league and there's nothing in the Kansas starting lineup to match his own 210 pounds, Pierce says.

"I am hoping that George Washington will be content just to win the ball game and not leave too many broken bodies of our po' l'il boys out there on the field for the sweepers, says Pierce. "We're just a little ball club with one end weighing 155, and the other end weighing 171, and we just try not to get hurt."

It seems the Jayhawks have been doing that latter thing admirably however. In their last three games they certainly came to no harm, with a 40-0 win over Denver U., a 40-7 victory over Colorado and a close squeak against Iowa State, 30-7.

BEFORE THAT THE JAYHAWKS did pretty well, too, against Texas Christian which was supposed to whup 'em by quite a few touchdowns. Kansas' po' li'l boys blew that one, 14-13. They're leading the Big Seven Conference. They have a passer in Dick Gilman who has already thrown eight touchdown heaves, more than did their big shot star, Ray Evans, all last season. Confidentially, they'rs not aiming to lose to the likes of George Washington.

Kansas has a new coach, J. V. (Siki) Sikes, who took over when George Sauer moved into the Navy head coach job after landing Kansas in a tie with Oklahoma for the Big Seven title last season. Sikes comes up from Georgia where he was assistant to Wally Butts and he brought along with him some of Butts' tough tactics like scrimmaging his athletes on the first day they reported for practice this year.

If the Jayhawks' first impressions under Sikes were that they were going to have it rough, they learned more about that later. After the first week of practice, he had 'em scrimmaging twice a day. It was Sikes who used to manage Butts' scrimmage sessions at Georgia, where the starting lineups were never announced until the survivors were counted.

THE LACK OF BIG men on the Kansas squad—they were outweighed 25 pounds to the man in the line against TCU—is not only Sikes' fault but his deliberate design. "He runs those fat boys off the field—don't want 'em around," Pierce says. "He likes those taut-bellied boys who can scramble around like a pack of rattlesnakes."

A guy who can scramble around, apparently, is Bryan Sperry, a 5-foot 9-inch end who has already caught 13 of Gilman's passes this year and is leading the Big Seven in the pass-catching department, despite his lack of height. And the other regular end, Dave Schmidt, apparently has talents of his own because he's a fixture at the job despite his mere 155 pounds.

In the backfield, they come bigger. Gilman, who quarterbacks the team and throws the passes is a lengthy 191-pounder and Fullback Forrest Griffith is 190. Left Halfback Frank Pattee tips 180. Right Halfback Bud French is a mere 168-pounder, though. Griffith and French are the boys who have been scoring touchdowns for the Jayhawks when Sperry wasn't catching Gilman's passes.

KANSAS PLAYS IT straight, off the T, much like Butts does at Georgia. Sikes doesn't fool around much with flankers, and as yet he hasn't even installed the man in motion. He's a stern disciple of the fast break and speed in every spot, and that extends even to his substitutions. Unless he is a basket case, every Jayhawk player taken out of a game sprints back to the bench or he catches it from Sikes.

Pierce doubts that the Jayhawks are going to be overconfident this evening. "We know all about Bo Rowland, the G.W. coach, who used to be in Oklahoma City," he says. "There isn't a better single-wing coach in the business as far as we are concerned, and his teams always did split a lot of skulls at Oklahoma."

At Georgia, Sikes helped Butts build five bowl teams that never were beaten in any bowl game. He has his Jayhawks believing in him, even if they don't believe in themselves. That extends even to the two-minute timeouts. They can loll, but not sit. That's Sikes' orders, on the theory probably that only shoemakers make progress sitting down.

Maryland, Duke Game Real Tossup

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

If ever there were two evenly matched football teams paired against each other, Maryland and Duke, who clash at Griffith Stadium Saturday, are the teams.

Any way you look at it, the game figures to be a tossup, which is the way the rival coaches regard it, but not the odds-makers. They have made Duke the choice by 10 points.

That's the day's best bet and if you can get it, the advice here is to latch on to it. It's not guaranteed, but it is highly recommended.

How does Duke get to be the betting favorite? Several things enter into the choice.

Duke's Slate Tougher

The schedule, for one. While Maryland rolled merrily along beating Richmond, Delaware and V. P. I. without having its goal line crossed, Duke admittedly was encountering stiffer opposition against N. C. State, Tennessee and Navy. The Blue Devils were tied in the first two, but beat Navy winging.

At the same time, however, Maryland looked the part of a potentially fine team against its breather opponents. None stopped the Terps, who amassed almost 1300 yards with a sputtering passing attack. Maryland often stopped itself, fumbling six times within the 10-yard line and twice on the 1-foot line.

Duke must be conceded an edge in the line. With the exception of center, the Devils have a truly great line. Cliff Keen, Michigan coach, who scouted the Navy-Duke game for the Wolverines, and Cliff Montgomery, the former Columbia star who refereed the game, both called it that.

The Duke line is built to smother a blasting, power attack, but it won't face that type of offense in the Maryland game. Instead, the Devils will be called on to stop a split-T formation attack which features dipsy-doodle handoffs, tricky laterals and sharp passing.

In their two most recent excursions against teams employing the split-T offense, Duke hasn't shown it could stop this style of play. True, the Durham Devils beat Maryland, 19-7, last year, but the Terps out-statisticed Duke in every offensive department and lost because they fumbled almost every time they got within putting distance of the goal line.

Duke Banks on Wallace Punts

Missouri, whose coach, Don Faurot, fathered the split-T attack, didn't fumble and walloped Duke, 28-0, last year.

The Duke offense is centered around the punt, a Wallace-Wade device of long standing. Wade plays a cautious punting game, hoping to recover a fumbled punt deep in enemy territory, or blocking a punt and marching from there.

Tailbacks Freddie Folger and Sophomore Billy Cox can punt and punt well. They can also pass and run. They constitute Duke's offense.

Against this Maryland offers an attack which is razzle-dazzle at its best. Quarterbacks Vic Turyn and Joe Tucker are good passers and Halfback Hubie Werner, injured most of last season, is a runner worth watching.

20,000 May See Game At Stadium

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

George Washington's scrappy Colonials, underdogs in almost every game they've played this season, are cast in that role again by 13½ points tonight when they engage potent Kansas at Griffith Stadium.

A throng of 20,000 is expected by kickoff time, 8:30.

Basis for the Jayhawkers' touting is their superior record against tougher opposition than GW has faced.

The rugged little Jayhawkers arrived here early last night and hustled right out to the ball park.

They loosened the kinks after a 29-hour train ride with a 40-minute signal drill under the lights.

Tonight's game will be the second under the lights for the Kansans this season, and G.W. backers are hoping that previous game isn't indicative. Kansas walloped Denver, 40-0, under the lights three weeks ago.

Before that game, the Jayhawkers lost a heartbreaker, 14-13, to Texas Christian. Since then, they've whipped Colorado, 40-7, and Iowa State, 20-7.

The Big Seven cochampions are operating their T formation under J. V. (Siki) Sikes, who succeeded George Sauer this season.

When he got a peep at the odds for tonight, Sikes shrugged his shoulders.

Disagrees on Odds

"From what I've heard about George Washington, this game ought to be a tossup," he drawled in his best Texas accent.

"Don Fambrough, our freshman coach, scouted GW when it lost to VMI, 26-6, and when it beat Virginia, 20-12. Don told us GW was good when it lost, but he said GW was darn good when it beat Virginia," Sikes went on.

"We shouldn't be favored over a team that beat Virginia. We're ready for a medium sized, fast line, and very, very good passing attack by GW," he concluded.

Engineer of the GW passing attack is Andy Davis, the homegrown freshman fullback, who ranks twelfth among the Nation's tossers. He has 24 completions in 47 tries for three touchdowns.

However, the Jayhawkers take no backseat to anyone in the passing department. They have a pretty good one themselves in Dick Gilman, their new quarterback.

Gilman was fourth string halfback last season, but the graduation of All-America Halfback Ray Evans necessitated a juggling in the Kansas ranks. Gilman was tried in the quarterback position and succeeded to the extent of completing eight scoring passes in four games.

G. W. Line Heavier

Picking up the slack in the running game are two veteran halfbacks, Forrest Griffith, leading scorer of the Big Seven last year, and Frank Pattee, a versatile line plunger and good punter.

The G. W. line will scale heavier than its Kansas adversary. But that's caused no great rejoicing in the Colonial camp. The last time G. W. outweighed the opposition, V. M. I. drubbed the Colonials 26-6.

There is only one doubtful starter for the Jayhawkers. He is Tackle Ed Lee, who at 212, is the

Reds Beat Ramblers

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 14 (AP).—The Providence Reds, flashing a better passing attack and a stouter defense than their opponents, downed the New Haven Ramblers, 5 to 2, tonight in the local arena's first American Hockey League game of the season.

Hoyas, Tulsa Now Rated Even Stephen

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Jack Hagerty's courageous Hoyas deliberately fly right into a Hurricane, golden variety, this morning.

Thirty-eight Georgetown gridders leave National Airport at 9 a. m. for their engagement at Skelly Stadium tomorrow afternoon with Tulsa, the school with that long nickname.

Hagerty and his aides understandably are gloomy because their roster won't include Henry (Babe) Baranowski, ace tailback, and Fullback Jack O'Connor. Baranowski's loss, because of a fractured collarbone suffered in a scrimmage Monday, has made Hagerty revise his pregame selection.

Tulsa Passer Tops

"With Baranowski, I thought we would win the game," Hagerty said yesterday after practice, "now, it's strictly a toss-up." And the latest word from the Minneapolis oddsmakers confirmed that statement. Earlier, Tulsa was a six-point favorite, now the game's an even bet.

Statistics supposedly make dull reading, but those for this game are surprisingly informative. In fact, they tell just about how the contest will be played.

For instance, a glance at the figures shows that Tulsa boasts the Nation's best passer on the basis of percentages of completions. Jim Finks is the Tulsa ace and none tops his 37 successful tosses in 64 attempts. In the three games the Oklahomans have lost, Finks has gained them 503 yards and completed two touchdown heaves.

So, naturally, Tulsa's going to throw that ball a lot. Georgetown is well aware of this and has stressed pass defense all week.

And the latest ominous word from Tulsa is that the weak end position has been strengthened with the addition of two proven wings. Ken Sutton, varsity player who dropped from the squad earlier this year to further his studies, was back in uniform yesterday.

Previously, a special Missouri Valley Conference ruling made Dick Moseley eligible for the rest of the season. He had been ruled out but the conference made an exception in his case because a

Navy Switch Gives Green Halfback Post

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—Jim Green, a nimble 170-pounder from Reading, Pa., had the edge today on Navy's contested right halfback post.

Coach George Sauer said he probably would give Green his first starting opportunity when the Midshipmen encounter Missouri in Baltimore's Babe Ruth Stadium Saturday.

The halfback slot opened up after Fullback Bill Hawkins was ordered to the hospital for a month's rest and Al McCully was handed his assignment. Bill Power, showing promise in his first year of varsity competition, and Green immediately scrambled for the vacancy.

Sauer said he leans toward Green on account of his greater experience.

The Middies ran through a signal drill this afternoon and scheduled an even lighter session tomorrow. Harry Train, a substitute center, was the only casualty in yesterday's rough and tumble scrimmage. He was put on the shelf with a broken nose.

Sauer said Tackle Ken Knoizen's status remains uncertain. Knoizen has fractured small bones in each hand this fall and still must favor them.

Bob Hunt appeared to have regained the right guard berth he lost to Charley Cooper last week and Bob Horne has been battling feverishly for the call at quarterback. Reaves Baysinger has opened each of Navy's three games to date.

Where to Obtain Terp, GW Tickets

Tickets for the George Washington-Kansas game at Griffith Stadium tonight may be purchased at Lisner Auditorium (GW campus) and Griffith Stadium.

Tickets for the Duke-Maryland contest at Griffith Stadium Saturday are on sale at Griffith Stadium, Ritchie Coliseum (Maryland U.), Fairway Sports Shop (1400 G st. nw.) and Bethesda Sports Mart, 7012 Wisconsin ave., Chevy Chase.

Mangrum's 66 Paces Tourney

Glendale, Calif., Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Lloyd Mangrum, battling with bantam Ben Hogan for the year's money-winning honors, shot a six under par-66 today for a three-stroke lead in the $15,000 Glendale Open Golf Tournament.

Hogan was in second place with a 69.

Mangrum, veteran Chicago golfer, went out on the first nine in even par but he came back six under par, shooting a 30 on the par 36 nine. He picked up birdies on the eleventh, thirteenth, fourteenth and seventeenth holes. On the final hole he shot an eagle three to complete the sensational round.

Skip Alexander of Lexington, N. C., who toured the first nine in a par-shattering 34, came back with a 36, even par, to finish with 70, two strokes behind Hogan.

Tied at 72 were Ralph Bloomquist of Glendale, Calif., with 36, 36; Joe Kirkwood, jr., Hollywood, 36, 36, and Paul Runyan of Pasadena, 37, 35.

In the 73 bracket were Marty Furgol, Albuquerque, 35, 38; Jimmy Thompson, Long Beach, Calif., 36, 37; Jack Harden, El Paso, 38, 35; Jerry Barber, Los Angeles, 36, 37, and Fred Haas, jr., New Orleans, 35, 38.

The lightning fast fairways of Oakmont Club proved attractive to the field of 152 players who turned out for the opening round.

Polly Riley Upsets Berg

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Pretty Polly Riley, Trans-Miss champion, shot a par-cracking 72 today to down Patty Berg, 2 and 1, in a quarterfinal match of the Texas Women's Open Golf Tournament.

The Fort Worth amateur was leading by three holes on the back nine when Miss Berg won the sixteenth to make it 2 and 2. They halved the next hole with pars, giving the match to Miss Riley over the Minneapolis girl. Both played out the round, with Miss Riley posting a 72, three under women's par, and Miss Berg a 74.

In the other quarterfinal matches, Mrs. Mildred Didrickson Zaharias, Denver, overcame Miss Betsy Rawls, Austin, Tex., 3 and 2; Helen Detweiler, Dallas, beat Mrs. Gordon Perrin, Eldorado, Ark., 5 and 4; and Mary Agnes Wall, Menominee, Mich., beat Mrs. H. J. Williford, Sherman, Tex., 4 and 3.

In the semifinal play tomorrow, pairings at the River Crest Country Club pit Miss Riley against Miss Wall, both amateurs; and "Babe" Zaharias against Miss Detweiler, the two surviving pros.

Referee Quits In Iowa State, Kansas Row

Kansas City, Oct. 14 (AP).—A football referee made the news today by withdrawing from his four remaining officiating assignments involving Iowa State College.

Ted O'Sullivan, well-known Midwest whistle tooter, acted six days after the Iowa State-Kansas University game on which Iowa State Coach Abe Stuber said the Jayhawker football team did half the work and "the officials did the other half" on the first Kansas touchdown. K. U. won, 20 to 7.

In a letter to Reaves Peters, executive secretary of the Big Seven Conference, O'Sullivan had this to say:

He thought an official should withdraw only in an "emergency"; that officials should receive the respect and confidence of the players and the coaches, and if this "relationship does not exist, sooner or later very unfortunate developments occur which prove embarrassing to everyone concerned."

Stuber said the officials in the game took abuse from the Kansas coaches.

He charged the officials heard this abuse and after that "the officiating breaks went Kansas' way. It was merely a case of a squeaking wheel getting the grease."

Stuber and O'Sullivan were teammates at the University of Missouri. They played on the same football team as freshmen in 1923, and together on the varsity the following three years.

In his letter to Peters, O'Sullivan contended he "heard no comment from Kansas coaches at any time, either before, during or following the game."

Skins' Dan Sandifer a First Choice for Grid Stardom

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

While their highest priced young star remains hospitalized, certain to miss at least half the season, the Redskins have no apologies to make for their rookie material as they go into Sunday's important tangle with the Philadelphia Eagles at Griffith Stadium.

Take Dan Sandifer, for instance.

While All-America Harry Gilmer, now useless with a damaged leg, was being picked as the 'Skins superduper bonus choice from the 1947 collegiate crop, Sandifer was a mere third choice in the regular draw.

But the big Louisiana State halfback already has paid for himself.

You'll see big Dan, wearing No. 20 jersey, backed up to the goal line out there Sunday. His is the dangerous task of running back punts and kickoffs, plus a few minor chores like pass defense. You'll see a lot of football player, too.

Dan's just 21, but his youth and inexperience with the pros are no handicap to the 190-pound, 6-footer. He runs as hard as a 220-pounder, as fast as a trackman and as deceptively as a scatback. His only difficulty so far has been the slowness of his start.

Dan made his Redskin debut three days after an undistinguished appearance in the Chicago All-Star game. In the West Coast intra-squad game he ran 95 yards for a touchdown the first time he touched the ball.

Ten days later, in the L. A. Ram exhibition, he leaned over the side line to take a Bob Waterfield punt, ran it 84 yards to a touchdown. The great Glenn Davis was the last man he dodged past.

At Denver's exhibition he scored on an 83-yard play, but at Birmingham he was injured briefly.

In three league games his record is: One time rushing, 7 yards; three passes caught, one for 7, one for 33 and one for 86 yards; four passes intercepted but only two allowed for 62 yards returned; three punts returned, 35 yards; three kickoffs returned, 57 yards.

THE PEOPLE WHO FRET about such things are calling the Eagles 10½ point favorites over the Redskins Sunday . . . Halftime entertainment, in addition to the usual appearance of the only undefeated band in the country (Redskin version) will include the second showing here of the Polish-American 62-piece allstring outfit which annually appears in Philadelphia's Mummers' Parade . . .

Colts Play Dons Tonight

Los Angeles, Oct. 14.—The Baltimore Colts' chance to atone for their last dismal outing depends entirely upon their stopping the great Glenn Dobbs in an All-America Conference game here tonight against the Los Angeles Dons.

After an encouraging start this season, the Baltimore club was humiliated at home last Sunday by the San Francisco '49ers, 56-14.

WINX Airs Game

Radio Station WINX (1340 on your dial) will carry the play-by-play account of the Baltimore Colts-Los Angeles Dons game tonight at Los Angeles. The broadcast will begin at 10:25 p. m.

Tittle again will be tossing for the underdog Colts and there's hope that Lu Gambino, great Maryland U. running ace, has found himself after going 40 yards for a touchdown in his last start.

All-America Heads Meet in New York

New York, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Club owners of the All-America Football Conference held a regular one-day meeting today at the New York Yacht Club, and an official announcement said only "routine business" was discussed.

Owners of all eight teams or their official representatives were present. The announcement said that league receipts so far this year are higher than at the same time last year. Among the other subjects discussed were several proposals for post-season games, but no conclusions were reached.

Chappuis Starts For Pro Dodgers

Brooklyn, Oct. 14 (AP).—Mickey Colmer, fullback, will be the only veteran in the Brooklyn Dodger line-up tomorrow night in the all-America Football Conference game with the Chicago Rockets. Each team will go after its second victory of the season.

Bob Chappuis, Michigan All-American player last year, has recovered from the bruised ribs suffered in the Chicago All-Star game and will start at left half for the Dodgers.

Lions, Rockets Play Tonight

Reinforced by the Porteous twins Dan and Frank, the Washington Lions make their second start tonight at 8:30 against the Philadelphia Rockets on Uline Arena ice.

Dan, a center, and Frank, a right winger, accounted for 113 points for the Lions last season. They ended their holdout siege and agreed to report yesterday.

The Rockets opened their season Wednesday by trimming Springfield, 3-0. The Lions bowed in by losing 5-2, to the champion Cleveland Barons.

Pacing the Rockets will be Phil Bergeshiemer, veteran right winger, and one of the American Hockey League's top scorers every year. Helping him out will be Kenny Kilrea, John Mahaffey, Mike Narduzzi and Harvey Jessiman, the shutout goalie.

More Hirings and Firings Due In Bosox, Yankee Purges

By Carl Lundquist

New York, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Brass hat bitterness in the also-ran Boston Red Sox and New York Yankee organizations was expected today to result in more hirings and firings.

Trouble in the Red Sox hierarchy broke out into the open when Coach Del Baker was fired and Hazen (Kiki) Cuyler, a spectacularly successful minor league manager with ambitions to be a big league pilot, was hired to replace him.

That deal prompted General Manager Joe Cronin to say his irascible field pilot, Joe McCarthy, instigated the firing of Baker.

"The whole thing was in McCarthy's hands," Cronin said. "I told Baker he was fired in a telephone conversation. I had to under the rules of baseball. I did it so he could find time to look for another job. But McCarthy handles the coaches and I have nothing to do with them."

But it was indicated that Cronin, probably acting under instructions from Millionaire Owner Tom Yawkey, hired Cuyler, a perennial producer on Southern Association winners at Atlanta.

Already fired by Yawkey and Cronin were Phil Troy, assistant general manager, and George Toporcer, chief of the farm system.

With the Yankees, the bitterness of Owners Dan Topping and Del Webb, and General Manager George Weiss, crystalized immediately when the season ended. They gave Bucky Harris, the popular field pilot, the heave-ho although he had won one pennant and missed a second by two days and two games. One of Harris' coaches, Johnny (Red) Corriden, also was dismissed and "Milkman" Turner hired in his place.

It was expected the other Yankee coaches, Charley Dressen and John Schule, would be replaced shortly. Al Simmons, coach of the Philadelphia Athletics; Johnny Neun, deposed manager of the Cincinnati Reds, and George Kelly, veteran Cincinnati coach, who was let out today, were most prominently mentioned as their successors.

Catholic, R-M Bolstered as Injured Return

Catholic University and Randolph-Macon, meeting each other on the rebound Saturday at Ashland, Va., will be reinforced by key men, who have been out with injuries.

The stock of the Cardinals soared yesterday when Coach Tom Chisari learned that Fullback Bill DeYoung, one of the hardest runners on the squad, would return for the Randolph-Macon fray.

Back in the Yellow Jackets' lineup after a week on the sidelines will be Ken Holloway, star halfback, Brown (Jeep) Phelps, captain and quarterback, and Marvin Garbett, stellar guard.

Both teams will be trying hard to regain their winning ways. The Cards, after trimming Patuxent, 14-0, in their opener, were defeated, 21-7, by Western Maryland last Saturday.

Guilford took the measure of the Jackets, 28-6, last Saturday. Before that game, Randolph-Macon had won once and lost once.

This will be the fourth meeting of the two schools. Randolph-Macon, defending Mason-Dixon Conference champion, won last year, 35-0. Catholic U. won the first two games.

Halfback Shoaf's Return Bolsters Virginia for W & L

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Ralph Shoaf, prospective halfback regular until crippled in preseason practice, took his full turn running on the offense today as Virginia's Cavaliers prepared for Saturday's clash with Washington and Lee.

Coach Art Guepe said Shoaf, used sparingly thus far, might test his injured shoulder more fully against the Generals. His return to regular duty would bring the Cavaliers to near-peak strength for the game.

The Cavaliers worked on passes almost exclusively today as Guepe put the squad through drills on offense and defense.

Spiders Seek Guard

Richmond, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Either Leonard Fendrich, of Pelham, N. Y., or John Reynolds, of Danville, will replace Russ Gulick at guard for the University of Richmond when the Spiders meet Coach Slick Morton's VMI Keydets at City Stadium Saturday night.

Gulick, a big, 200-pounder from Fair Lee, Vt., was declared ineligible today by Southern Conference officials. The report simply started that Gulick's period of eligibility had expired and that he could no longer play football in the conference.

The Spiders continued making preparations for Saturday night's contest as they ran through light offensive and defensive plays today with part of the freshman squad.

Beasley Leads VPI

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Ray Beasley, 180-pound senior halfback, was chosen by Coach Bob McNeish today to captain Virginia Tech's Gobblers in their Saturday clash with William and Mary.

Beasley, who also captained the Gobblers in their 13-0 loss to George Washington, has been Tech's most effective halfback.

McNeish turned the Gobblers' attention to offensive today as they began tapering off for the battle with the strong Indians, trying for more speed to offset the William and Mary weight advantage.

Indians Stress Attack

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Offensive maneuvers came in for most attention today as William and Mary drilled for Saturday's battle with Virginia Tech.

Coach Rube McCray concentrated on the timing of passing and running plays. Linemen practiced goal-line stands.

Passes Worry Generals

Lexington, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—The Washington and Lee Generals worked on pass defense today as word from the Virginia camp indicated Saturday's homecoming classic here will be an all-out aerial battle.

Mike Boyda, the General's star passer, remained on the sidelines in street clothes for the third day. His position was taken by Freshman Ray Leister.

Keydets Rehearse

Lexington, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—The VMI Keydets rehearsed today against University of Richmond plays.

They practiced pass protection and pass defense. They also worked out on punter protection with Jack Hutchinson and Paul Shrader booting and Bobby Thomason and Joe Veltri passing.

Quantico Plays Bolling

In the top service game in this area the undefeated Quantico Marines meet unbeaten, unscored-upon Bolling Field here Saturday with first place in the Middle Eastern Service Conference at stake.

The Marines will be protecting a 15-game winning streak that enabled them to take the All-Navy championship last season.

So far this season, Quantico holds decisions over Fort Belvoir, 44-27; Camp Lejeune, 18-0, and Wayne University, 7-0.

Bolling Field squeeed by Camp Lee, 3-0, and walloped Camp Holabird, 45-0, and Ninth Infantry Division, 52-0.

Kickoff for the important conference test will be at 2 p. m.

Raschi Enrolls Again At William and Mary

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Raschi, New York Yankee pitcher, has enrolled at the College of William and Mary for the fall semester.

Raschi will continue his course of study in physical education. He is to receive his degree in February. Raschi attended William and Mary prior to the war.

Ramblers Tie For First If They Win

Eastern Ramblers, tied for second place, and moving up fast, challenge front-running Central for first place today in the feature of three Interhigh League football games.

In the shuffle for other contending positions, McKinley Tech plays at Wilson, and Anacostia meets Roosevelt at Central Stadium, all at 3:30 p. m.

Called a "one-man team" by its critics, Central faces its severest test against the Ramblers, who have no stars, but are well protected at every position, and have depth, too.

A loss for unbeaten Central will boost Eastern into a tie for first place, both teams with 3-1 records.

Jimmy Pantos, who hops back and forth between halfback and quarterback depending on whether his team is using the box or T formation, has handled most of Central's running, passing, punting and placement kicking. He's been so indispensable that he's used on defense too.

Eastern's T attackers are hoping to more than neutralize the 155-pound whirlwind with boys like Quarterback Dom Adriani, a fine passer, Halfback Ritchie Hite, a swift breakaway runner, and Halfback Bernie Shipley, a good runner and punter.

The Ramblers' line, too, has sparkled as Eastern, after losing to Wilson, has successively beaten Coolidge and Western. Jim Follin and Bob Loratto are two of the finest guards in the loop, and John Foley is one of the better ends.

George Washington High of Alexandria, beaten or tied in its last three outings, is picked to get back on the winning trail tonight when it entertains Fairfax in an important Northern Virginia game at 8.

Sullivan Duo Pays $11.80; $13.80 for 2d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 14.—Drift, a chip off the old jumping block Annapolis, and his stablemate, The Heir, ran and fenced their way to a one-two victory in the $10,000 added Butler Steeplechase. This pair raced in the colors of Mrs. Corliss Sullivan and they showed excellent teamwork.

Although Drift won by seven lengths, a claim of foul had to be considered by the stewards before the official sign was flashed. However, the officials did not change the result and the Sullivan entry returned $11.80 to win and $13.80 place.

The Rokeby Stable's entry of American Way and Genancoke finished third and fourth, respectively and Charley Peoples, rider of Genancoke, claimed a foul against Drift, who was handled by Harry Harris.

It appeared that Harris had brought Drift over sharply at the club house turn the second time around and in doing so caused Peoples to take up Genancoke and move to the outside. The officials apparently did not believe that enough trouble had been caused to bring about a disqualification.

Drift, a 4-year-old, is trained by Rigan McKinney, former leading steeplechase rider who is now a director of the Maryland State Fair, Inc., which operates the Laurel track. The winner was brought up to the Butler in excellent condition and turned the 2 miles in 3.53 1/5.

Winners Well Regarded

S. Bryce Wing, vice president of Laurel and president of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association, was in the winner's circle following the Butler running and presented a trophy to McKinney, son of Owner Mrs. Sullivan.

With Drift earning a lion's share of $9,460 and The Heir taking the $2000 second prize, the Butler running enriched the Mrs Sullivan stable with $11,460. Many members of the enthusiastic steeplechasing set believe that Drift is the best young jumper in training and much will be expected of this fine looking chestnut gelding during the remainder of the Maryland fall season.

Despite the foul claim, Drift was clearly the best member of the field as weighted today by Steeplechase Secretary Fred Colwill. The deer-like jumper took up a 134-pound burden and handled this package without making a bobble while completing the 13-jump course.

Harris rated Drift in back of Genancoke and Sun Bath for the first turn of the field, permitted his mount to pick up speed as the field passed the stand the second time and then took the lead from Genancoke about three quarters of a mile from the finish.

Drawing away between the final fence and the wire, Drift seemed to have some speed in reserve at the end. The Heir came on gamely and had little trouble taking the place money 3½ lengths to the good of American Way.

Practically the same field as raced in the Butler will go back next Thursday in the $10,000 added Governor Ogle Steeplechase Handicap which also will be run at two miles.

Oberod allies to Score

The Cold Stream Purse, sixth event and best of the flat races, attracted a clever group of fillies and mares and Christiana Stable's Oberod came from last place to win by a head from Nydrie Stable's Highfortidies in one of the best races of the meet.

Bringing great disappointment to the form players, Calumet Farm's Happiness, who was backed down to 3-to-5 in the win pool took only the show money after getting to the front in the stretch.

As she had failed to win in 10 previous starts this year, Oberod was neglected to some extent in the wagering and returned a win mutuel of $14.60. Jockey Porter Roberts was close to the rail on Oberod throughout the mile and a sixteenth and was fortunate in finding racing room on the inside at the head of the lane. Oberod traveled the distance in 1:45 1/5.

George Cohen's Eddie Leonard stepped to the winner's circle to return $10.40 straight in the second race and to bring up the second half of a $26.60 daily double, composed of the numbers 6 and 6.

J. Bowes Bond of Towson, sent out the winner of the fourth race in White Face, a 3-year-old he trains for the High Ground Stable. Ready to go a mile and a sixteenth when several of her rivals appeared to tire, White Face won from Mrs. Robert H. Heighe's Kashmir while Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Battle Cry, the choice, was third. White Face paid $14.60 and went a mile and a sixteenth in 1:45 1/5

In Saturday's Big Games

Michigan, California, Penn, Duke Selected

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Ready for anything after what happened last week, we skip blithely into another football forecast with an average of .748 on 172 correct predictions and 58 misses, plus a realization that a football is likely to take some peculiar bounces:

Northwestern vs. Michigan—Both are undefeated and the winner can start making room in its trophy case for the Big Nine bauble. Although ineligible for a return trip to Rose Bowl, the Wolverines are sniffing at another Conference title. Northwestern has the country's best air defense record but Michigan can move overland. That's the story. The secretary will cast one vote for Michigan.

Oregon State vs. California—Her's your oth Rose Bowl team. After breezing through four non-conference opponents, the Golden Bears now open their bid for the Pacific Coast title with the first of six straight Conference games. They should get past an Oregon State team with a 2-1-1 record and may go all the way. A confident vote for California.

Pennsylvania vs. Columbia—The Lions can score from anywhere, but they have a habit of offering their opponents the same privilege. The unbeaten Quakers are stout up front and that's likely to be the margin here. On the theory that the defense will tell, one tiny vote for Pennsylvania.

Southern Methodist vs. Rice—How the mighty have fallen, especially in the once-proud Southwest Conference. The Mustangs will be mean, after losing to Missouri, and don't figure to blow this one, which finds them opening the defense of the Southwest title. Southern Methodist.

Illinois (vs. Minnesotta—The Gophers couldn't hold their lead against Northwestern. Illinois almost overhauled the home club most overhauled Army after trailing by 26 points. Both should have learne dsome lessons, but the defensive margin definitely rests with th home club here. On tthe rebound, Minnesota.

North Carolina State vs. North Carolina—The Tar Heels now carry the label of the country's best. State boasts the top all-around defensive record in the land, but it won't last for long. A hefty vote for North Carolina.

Duke vs. Maryland—The only major team with its goal uncrossed is Maryland. That can't go on indefinitely, can it?. Duke.

Missouri vs. Navy—No other choice here, after what the Tigers did to Southern Methodist. Missouri.

BARNABY

I've heard of the proposed sale of a strip of land at the far end of this estate near the town, O'Malley. For an annex to the school.
Yes, but—
SWEET HOME
It won't bother me. I stick rather close to the house—
But, Gus—
This entire estate was sold! House and all!
OH!
Mr. O'Malley my Fairy Godfather will think of a place you can go—
Dear me!
Hmmm. Offhand, Barnaby, there's your house, but—kidney injury he suffered in 1946 put him out of play.

Baylor dumped Tulsa in its opener, 42-19. And then the Golden Hurricane blew futilely against Florida, 14-28, and Texas Tech, 20-41. In those last two, Tulsa out-first downed Florida, 22-13, and Tech, 17-6. But, and here's a significant thing, Texas Tech gained 218 yards rushing; Florida, 300.

Remember, Georgetown's strongest offense is its running game. Without Baranowski, the Hoyas best passer, they'll stick mainly to getting their yardage the hard way.

It's all so simple—Georgetown's rushing will have to offset the passing of this boy Finks. Now all you have to do is pick the winner.

Cracking at the Kansas line will be G. W.'s three best running threats, Dick Koester and Bill Spangler, two big boys, and Scatback Jimmy Kline.

A colorful halftime pageant is on the agenda too, with the 90-piece Air Force Band, under Maj. Howard Roberts, offering high-stepping music.

Judge Edward Curran postponed sentencing of Jamison pending a report from the probation office.

Allen Heads UNESCO Delegates

By Nicha Soure

THE United States delegation of United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, headed by Assistant Secretary of State George V. Allen, will leave in three weeks to attend the third session of the general conference at Beirut, Lebanon, Dr. Esther C. Brunauer said yesterday.

Dr. Brunauer, who spoke before the civics education section of the Twentieth Century Club at a luncheon meeting in the YWCA, said the delegation will include Mrs. Anne O'Hare McCormick of the New York Times, Mrs. Kathleen Lardie of the Detroit school system, Mrs. Louise Leonard Wright, director of the Chicago Council of Foreign Relations, and Dr. Brunauer, assistant director of UNESCO relations staff, Department of State.

The general conference, which was scheduled for the middle of October, was postponed in order not to conflict with the United Nations General Assembly in Paris.

Countries of the Near East have shown great interest in UNESCO from the beginning, Dr. Brunauer told club members, and within the past year Afghanistan, Iran and Iraq have joined. The provisional government of Israel has recently applied for membership, Dr. Brunauer said.

The General Council of UNESCO, composed of 42 member states, is meeting to consider the program

Big Dinner May Wreck Fine Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

What is the average woman's worst figure fault? Chorus: The middle spread! Does eating a big dinner contribute to the spread? Let's figure it out . . .

Do you recall the experiments in which one set of little white mice were given all their calories at one time, while the other set had the same amount of food divided into three meals a day? If the two groups were mixed, nobody would have any trouble telling them apart. The mice who had three meals a day appeared sleek and streamlined, and those who were given all their rations at one big meal, got the middle spread!

How do we account for this? Well, calories are used on the spot for energy, if needed. But if the calories are in excess of the amount needed, the excess is stored. To be more explicit . . . starch and sugar calories, classed as carbohydrates, are tucked away in the liver as glycogen, and to a small extent in the muscles so as to be right on tap for ready energy. But when these storage places are filled and the starches and sugars keep a-comin', say in the form of hot buttered biscuits, and/or chocolate cake, the extra calories furnished thus, not being required then, are packed away in the concentrated form of fat. Also, the butter on the bun, and the chocolate, if extra, go straight to the waist, for all fats are either used or stored.

So there you are, when the bulk of calories are taken at the end of the day's activities, they are less apt to be required for energy and more apt to be stored.

But the habit of eating an oversize meal at any time, stretches the stomach. And as it enlarges, appetite grows bigger and over-eating can very quickly become habit . . . all of which contributes to the spread.

It's not difficult to figure why eating a big dinner tends to spread the middle measurement. Add to this the fact that we do not use the big figure-controlling muscles in everyday activities, particularly when we slump amidships which causes those muscles to lose tone, and you have the whole picture.

If you've been overeating at dinner for years, why not try having a better breakfast, an adequate lunch and a moderate dinner? You may be pleasantly surprised at results.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman, 52, Defensively Feels That Husband And Three Sisters Consider Her a Shirker For Being Homebody Instead of Wage-Earner

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I were a very happy devoted couple for 30 years, but lately I don't feel the same towards him. Of recent months he has been dwelling on the idea of my going to work, just to save more money, as he puts it.

When we first married I worked to help him, and when I had a business for five years, I was in it with him and did all my housework, too. But now that I am 52 and he earns a good salary and we save nice money, I feel that I don't need to grind so hard.

We have just bought a new car and have money saved for a new home also, and it was my delight to cook and bake for him what he likes and see him happy and contended in our clean home; but he feels that I have too much time on my hands, now that our children are grown. One is married and the other is in college.

Wife's Sisters Work for Money

HOWEVER, I tell him that my time is well occupied, as I do all the cleaning, cooking and laundry, also the painting and paperhanging in our apartment, and as a hobby I love to sew or crochet. He is very kind and will buy me anything; and most of the fault lies with my family.

Three of my sisters are working, one from necessity, and the other two because they want more income, and every time they buy some luxury my husband points out the wife's contribution and feels I should be earning, too. When I tell him their husbands help cook and clean floors, he says he'd never do that; but still he thinks I should do two jobs.

I feel that I couldn't be a job-holder and do as well at home; yet my sister who works from necessity says these stay-at-home "ladies of leisure" have a racket. I think she envies me. I told her that I have no racket, as I do all the housework without help. What do you think? Lately I hear too much about going to work. Should I try it and see what happens? Please answer soon.

R. B.

Work Has Values Aside From Money

DEAR R. B.: There are good reasons for working besides saving money. And the person who doesn't "have" to work, but does, is likely to take more intangible profit from the experience than those who must plug to meet expenses.

It occurs to me that your husband, without saying so, and perhaps without realizing what's on his mind, is trying to bring new life to the marriage, in urging you to trade housedress for business garb.

Whatever his work, it keeps him in touch with a running stream of life in the outside world. And I suspect that he finds the atmosphere of home vaguely stagnant and melancholy, as polished and lifeless as a well-tended tomb, with the children gone; and probably realizes more and more what a boring partner in doubleharness you have become, in your narrow preoccupation with nothing but housekeeping.

Woman's Neurotic Conscience Nags Her

TO SAVE space, I have pruned and clarified your letter which rambled a lot, with accent on "I," and sparked the inference that you have no interests beyond your four walls; and this, I must say, is a dried-up condition of personality that a woman your age should avoid at all costs. It is guaranteed to drive people from you.

Also it strikes me that you have a bad conscience about your lady-of-leisure regime, which might be due to the fact that you've struggled nervously all your life for cash-security, have achieved it only recently, and in trying hard to sit back and enjoy it, are constantly nagged by an uneasy feeling that you're doing wrong, that you ought to be battling the wolf as always.

This might explain why you do battalion-labor around the house, where only two adults stir up dust, as if to prove to your accusing conscience that you haven't time to earn; and also, why you are straw-fighting the example of your sisters, who continue to chase the almighty dollar.

All things considered, I believe you would feel better about life, would have more peace of mind, and more interests in common with husband and family, if you took on some systematic, productive activity outside the home.

How to Get Junior to Bed—Quietly

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is sometimes amazing how tractable a child can become when the mother uses just a little ingenuity to get him to follow suggestions, instead of giving blunt orders, and expecting them to be obeyed.

Children grow into an appreciation of the fun of being part of the family circle and come bedtime they are reluctant to be seperated from it. It is the small fry who must always leave all of the others behind and it is understandable that it may demand some tact to get him away peacefully. Just to say, "It's time for bed," is not convincing enough, even though he may know that it is.

Peter found it hard to give up the red blocks when it came time to depart. He clung to them and would not be parted from them. Then he ran to his grandmother and clung to her and like the ostrich hid his face so that his mother, who wanted to take him upstairs, might not be able to find him.

Instead of grasping him and carrying him upstairs to the tune of protesting cries, his mother said, "Watch me, Peter, I am going to put all the little red blocks to bed in the big carton." So out of one eye he watched the blocks being put to bed.

Then she said, "Grandma is going to carry up your doggie, and I am going to carry Peter," as if this were some especially big treat. So without more ado Grandma arose and paraded up the stairs with the small, furry pet dog which spent the early part of each night in Peter's fond arms, and Peter found himself making up the second part of the parade which wended its way upstairs.

This is just one way which happened to work this one time. Sometimes, the tactics have to be varied and some one of the family chases Peter and tries to catch him going up the stairs. Sometimes, he rides pickaback, or takes some other toy with him as companion.

The object, of course, is to release his emotional grasp on the family and if one or another member of it can go along with him and he can finally be got into the upper region, then the proper mood of going to bed descends upon him and he submits to the rigamarole of getting undressed which has bed at the conclusion of it.

MRS. NARCISO RAMOS (right), wife of the Philippine Minister-Counselor, and Mme. Jean Baube, wife of a French Embassy counselor, exchange recipes at the United Nations Club, where dishes native to many different lands are served

Filipino-French Exchange

'Round-the-World Recipes Swapped by U.N. Club Members

By Lucia Brown

EXCHANGING recipes is bound to be a popular pastime in a city as cosmopolitan as Washington, and nowhere is it enjoyed more than at the United Nations Club.

People from all over the world meet at the club on the corner of 19th and R sts. nw., whose membership is made up of 1000 nationals representing 55 countries. They ask the chef to prepare dishes that were favorites back home. They taste foods that are favorites with their friends from other countries. Soon they're collecting recipes. And by the time they return to their native healths, meals served at their own tables have taken on a 'round-the-world quality.

At a recent recipe-swapping session at the club Mrs. Narciso Ramos, wife of the Philippine Minister-Counselor, contributed a recipe for chicken and pork adobo.

Mrs. Ramos, who starred on the first television show about Filipino food last spring, is official hostess at the Philippine Embassy. Pretty and youthful, she is the mother of three children—Fidel, who is in West Point; Leticia, a Wellesley student, and Gloria, who attends junior high.

Both the Spanish and Chinese have influenced her country's dishes, says Mrs. Ramos. The Filipinos are fond of highly seasoned foods, tropical fruits, and rice, which they even eat for breakfast. With chicken and pork adobo, Mrs. Ramos says, rice would be served and perhaps a green vegetable cooked with pork and shrimp. Dessert might be leche flan, a steamed custard with sirup over it.

CHICKEN AND PORK ADOBO

2½ pounds young chicken
1 pound pork chops
1 medium head of garlic, crushed
1/3 cup vinegar
1 tablespoon salt
1 medium-sized onion, sliced
1 teaspoon peppercorns

Clean chicken and cut into eight pieces. Cut pork chops to about 2-inch pieces. Combine the meat, vinegar and seasonings. Add enough hot water to barely cover the meat. Cover and simmer until the meat is tender and the water has evaporated. Fry meat until it is brown, adding additional fat if necessary. This recipe makes 8 to 10 servings. (The same sort of dish can be made with chicken alone, Mrs. Ramos says, with 4 tablespoons of fat added for the frying.)

MADAME BAUBE, wife of French Embassy Counselor Jean Baube, gave a recipe for one of her favorite dishes, Crepes Barle-Duc. English by birth, Madame Baube is most enthusiastic about French cooking, considering it the finest in the world.

"My children like American food, though," laughs slender, charming Madame Baube, pointing out that her family has lived in Washington for 10 years. They first came here when Monsieur Baube was representative for Havas News Agency. He became press counselor for the French Embassy during the war. Their children, 15-year-old Anne and 13-year-old Ian, attend the Maret School.

Crepes Bar-le-Duc are very like Crepes Suzette, Madame Baube says, but with a special filling. They are a delicious and not-too-sweet dessert. Her recipe follows:

CREPES BAR-LE-DUC

3 eggs
1 ounce (about 3½ tablespoons) powdered sugar
½ pint (1 cup) cold milk

See BROWN, Page 10, Column 3.

Seafood Tips

Overcooked oysters are always tough. Stop cooking them before the edges begin to curl.

Never boil an oyster. Oyster stews are best cooked over water.

Fillets of flounder are extra crisp when dipped in cornmeal before frying. Serve them with mashed potatoes dusted with paprika, green peas and apple or peach chutney.

Cook It This Way . . .

Cream a little butter or margarine, add a dash of salt, sugar and finely grated onion. Spread this mixture on tomato halves and broil.

Glaze sweet potatoes with currant jelly by spreading the jelly over the surface of the precooked potatoes and heating in the oven.

Season a pound of lean ground beef with finely grated onions, salt and pepper and a tablespoon or so of tomato juice or milk. Shape into large flat cakes and broil until done; turn with two pancake turners if desired. Dust with paprika and dry mustard and dot with butter or margarine before serving.

To make homemade noodles, beat an egg and mix with a cup of flour that has been sifted with a half teaspoon of baking powder and a quarter teaspoon salt. Roll out thin, dust with flour, roll up in jelly roll fashion and cut fine; spread out to dry on a tea towel.

Board Sessions Draw National Club Leaders

Approximately 80 leaders in the General Federation of Women's Clubs arrived in Washington yesterday for a preliminary mapping-out session of the organization's two-day national board meeting, opening this morning at the Statler Hotel.

All of the federation's State presidents except the one from Alaska will be on hand for the policy setting conclave. Both Alaska and the District of Columbia are listed as States. Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, national federation head, will preside.

Highlight of today's sessions will be a dinner meeting 7 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel with Lieut. Gen. A. C. Wedemeyer, GSC, and Dr. Stringfellow Barr, president, Foundation for World Government, as principal speakers. The former will discuss "Strategic Planning in the National Defense Program" and the latter will outline "The Problems of World Government."

Following committee reports and adoption of resolutions at the morning session a luncheon will be held from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m. at the Statler Hotel—convention headquarters.

Committee reports and indorsement of resolutions will be featured Saturday morning, and Marriner S. Eccles, member of the board of governors, Federal Reserve System, will address a luncheon gathering on "Inflation, Its Causes and Control."

of the organization, according to Dr. Brunauer. The program covers the six major fields, cultural reconstruction, international communications, education, cultural institutions, natural science and social sciences.

In the communications field, continued Dr. Brunauer, there has been a great deal of discussion in the United Nations and UNESCO about operating their own world-wide radio network. Nothing has been done, however, she said, due to the technical and financial problems. The General Assembly will work on ways in which to better utilize the facilities already at their disposal, she stated.

Pushover for Children, Gen. Marshall Takes Hand In Report on Chip, Jr.

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

CHARLES BOHLEN, the State Department's Russian expert, and Mrs. Bohlen are in Paris on a U. N. assignment. Their very young son, of whom they are rightly and inordinately fond, remained in Washington. So. Mrs. B. asked Secretary Marshall if he'd have one of his staff make a personal report on her baby.

The Secretary sent his Man Friday, Sergeant George, to see Master Bohlen. But the sergeant, captivated, picked him up and brought him down to the Secretary's office so he could see for himself how the kid was doing. Once there, Secretary Marshall, who's a pushover for children, called in a photographer, had a picture made of "Chip" jr., sitting on his knee. And within 24 hours, Avis Bohlen knew precisely how her son looked.

Colonel Andrus to Speak

SPEAKER at the Women's National Democratic Club's Monday luncheon is to be Col. Burton Andrus, who formerly held down the excitingly exacting job of security officer and custodian of top Nazi criminals during the Nuernberg trials. Now he's back in this country as Assistant Inspector of our Organized Reserves and doing a spot of study on the side.

At Nurenberg the colonel's greatest worry was preventing suicide and escape attempts among Nazidom's prize prisoners. Only one, Goering, slipped through his fingers, escaped hanging by self-poisoning. Obviously Goering was the colonel's greatest challenge, so it is natural his favorite anecdote revolves around the late reichsmarshal and—an American shoulder patch.

Colonel Andrus, somehow drawn into correcting the curious shoulder patches concocted in World War I, became a self-styled "dabbler" in heraldry and at Nuernberg created a special design for the security detachment of courtroom guards. Boiling down somewhat complicated heraldic terms the patch was a Norman shield with blue background. The upper section depicted the Nazi emblem in a key, then gold scales, the base a ragged, flamelike edge with a broken Nuernberg eagle reposing amidst the flames. Symbolically, the key and swastika showed we had the babes in their own jail, the scales represented justice, the flames what's gaily termed "the pit of wrath" with Nuernberg's once majestic bird being destroyed by them.

Naturally, Goering took all this in and one day, while being questioned by Dr. Gilbert, the prison psychiatrist, complained bitterly that he didn't like the looks of the broken Nazi eagle, wanted it removed. Dr. Gilbert, somewhat stumped, asked Colonel Andrus what to reply.

Here's how the colonel fixed bumptious Goering. "The shoulder patch was not designed to gain the approbation or approval of defendant Goering nor are his comments desired in this matter or any other matter concerning the uniform or shoulder patch of the security guard."

Later Goering paid off Andrus at considerable price, concealing a lethal dose of poison in a fold of flesh.

Anyway, Goering's opinion enhanced the shoulder patch. It was made up in enamel as a brooch and hundreds were sold.

Colonel Andrus was literally born into the Army, or rather the Fourth Infantry, in which his father served. He deserted temporarily to the flesh pots of the Standard Oil, but returned permanently during the first World War.

Tempest Among the Scholars

Pepping up the static pre-election atmosphere is a refined little teapot tempest among, of all people, Washington's group of Rhodes scholars! The local list includes such distinguished personalities as Norman Littell, Senator William Fulbright, Associated Pressman "Pat" Morin, and Stanley Hornbeck, our former Ambassador to the Netherlands. While most of these and their Rhodian confreres were escapees from Washington heat another Rhodes scholar, who hailed from New Mexico, on his own hook and without previous consulation, planned a dinner to honor the British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks, and sent out invitations from "The Washington Rhodes Scholar Group." The dinner is slated for October 26 in the Library of Congress restaurant, the Pavillion.

What's causing the fuss is that the invitations are printed, rather than engraved, and there's a place left blank for what the occasion's impresario says is autographs! Secondly, the dinner's a $2 affair, scarcely grand enough for even the most unpretentious ambassador, and by the time flowers, printing, etc., are reduced from the overall there'll be about 75 cents for food.

Finally, the New Mexican Rhodes scholar has marked the invitation as "informal." But most irritating of all, the Rhodes scholars who, plus their attractive wives, know how to stage an interesting and appropriately comme-il-faut entertainment, were left out in the cold. As a result most of them are planning to boycott the affair and the British Ambassador may find himself among a decidedly unscholarly group!

On the Capital Party Calendar . . .

MR. AND MRS. NORMAN LITTELL entertained at dinner last evening at their home in Arlington, Va., for Oei Tong Haouw of Java and Mme. Haouw.

Other guests were Mme. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador; the Brazilian Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco; the Financial Counselor of the Netherlands Embassy and Mme. Soutendijk, the Commercial Counselor of the French Embassy and Mme. Dreux, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Count Henri Degenfeld and Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Whittemore.

Honor Mr. Menzies

AUSTRALIAN Ambassador Norman Makin entertained at a small stag luncheon yesterday at the Metropolitan Club for Robert G. Menzies, opposition leader in the Australian Parliament and former Prime Minister.

And later in the day Mr. Menzies was honored by Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis at an informal dinner at their home. Ambassador Makin was among the guests.

Dinner Before Play

MRS. Louise Noonan Miller will entertain at dinner Wednesday evening, October 20, taking her guests later to the opening of "Hamlet" at the Playhouse.

Mrs. George Mesta will fly down from Newport for the occasion and Representative Wright Patman will take a plane from Texas to be here for the party.

Remember Fashion Rule of 14 If You Would Be Well Dressed

Before you put that bracelet on—count to 14! Before you choose that multi-colored scarf—make sure the decoration won't mean inflation of the "14-count."

In other words, be careful lest you break one of the oldest, and yet one of the most important of fashion rules. It's a rule that was put in print as long ago as 1849, in the "Lady's Book"—and it's just been brought back into print by charm columnist Eleanore King, author of a new book, "Glorify Yourself."

The rule is simplicity itself. "Never wear a costume that comprises more than eye-arresting elements. Not counting your undercover garments, you should be able to count up to 14—but no higher!"

How It Works

Let's see how it works.

You want to look pretty tonight, but not extreme. You wear a brown crepe basic dress, with a blue rose at the belt. You want your accessories to have a festive air. Your shoes are brown suede with brown suede bows. Your purse is brown faille with a gold initial. You wear a cocktail hat of three colors blending into brown. Suppose you decide on a gold necklace, a couple of gold bracelets, some gold earrings. You wear your engagement ring. You wear below-the-elbow gloves, with gold stitching. You have a fur wrap, but it seems a little plain; so you put a jeweled clip on it.

And—you're miserably overdressed. The count comes to 18—4 points over maximum for a girl who wants to look her best.

Here is how the count works. You count one point for each and every accessory. A clip counts one point, and so do earrings or a pair of bracelets. You count one point for each basic article of wear; your dress, for example, your shoes, your hat, or your wrap. But if the shoes have a buckle, a bow, or a platform with nail-heads, you add another point to the total. If your hat has more than one color, each color rates a point. And if your dress has buttons, bows, belts, or trim, you'd add points for them. Gloves count one point, but stitching or buttons on them add another. Sequinned fabrics, metallic cloth, and highly-beaded materials count five in themselves.

Take Them Off

In the example given above, you must shave at least four points from the total. So out go the initial on the purse, the clip on the wrap, the bracelets and the earrings. It's that easy to be fashion-right!

Women Visitors To Receive Orchids At Home Exposition

One thousand corsages of exotic Princess Aloha baby orchids will be flown in from Hawaii by special delivery for women guests at the National Capital Annual Home-Show Exposition, to be staged at the D. C. Armory October 16-24, 1 to 10:30 p. m. daily.

The floral pieces—with two blooms to each corsage—will be presented to 500 women attending the show on October 18. Another 500 corsages will be given to feminine home show visitors on October 20. Each corsage will be decorated with a ribbon bow.

Clarence W. Gosnell, president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, which group is sponsoring the annual home exposition, says that the flowers will arrive in fresh, lovely condition, and will add another note of beauty "to a home show that will be replete with hundreds of attractive exhibits."

About Campaign Against Pests

My house is simply overrun with moths and silver fish. Although I have used DDT, I have not been too successful for the simple reason that I have not been able to close up the house. It has been suggested that the burning of a sulphur candle might help. How effective will that be? Do you know of anything more effective? Will the use of the candle be detrimental to any furniture or fabrics?

V. O. J.

For a sulphur candle to be an effective fumigant, the house in which it is burned must be completely sealed. Sulphur fumes will bleach the colors of fabrics and wallpaper and will tarnish bright metals, so all removable articles must be taken out before it is used. Since you indicate that you have an insect problem of major proportions, I would suggest you enlist the aid of a professional exterminator. Look under "Exterminators" in the yellow pages of the telephone book.

However, if you wish to attack the problem yourself here are some facts about moths which will help you do a thorough job of getting rid of them: In the flying stage, moths are not destructive, but since in this stage they lay 100 or more eggs which later develop into the destructive larvae or worm stage, all moths should be killed. Moth eggs are about the size of a pin head and are laid on fabric surfaces, in cracks and crevices, under rugs and in other little-frequented places where wool is found. Clothes in frequent use will not be injured by moth worms, but infrequently used or stored fabrics will be much damaged by the feeding of the larvae as they develop. So, the best protection against damage is to be sure that all woolens are free from moth eggs and larvae when they are stored. Dry cleaning each garment is the best preparation for storage and thorough brushing and sunning is the next best method. Also, exposing to out-of-door air 15 degrees above zero or lower for eight hours will kill moth eggs and larvae.

Moth sprays, applied by usual home methods, cannot be expected to kill all the eggs or larvae which might be present in the fabric. The eggs could be embedded in the fabric and webbing so they would not be reached except by the power spraying used by commercial firms for moth proofing.

It is surely not an easy job to get rid of moths' eggs once they become entrenched, but, of course, you must attack it. Empty all closets containing wool, furs, feathers and hair articles. Send them to the cleaners or vigorously brush and expose to the sun. Now, while the closets are empty, wash walls and floors and spray a good moth repellent into corners and cracks. Running the brush attachment of your vacuum sweeper along floor cracks and moldings will also remove infestations. When you return the cleaned or thoroughly brushed and sunned garments to the closets, seal in garment bags or boxes with a generous amount of moth preventative crystals.

Going over all woolen upholstered pieces and rugs thoroughly once a week with the attachment of the vacuum sweeper will remove eggs and larvae and keep these articles free from damage. Occasionally spraying upholstery and rugs with moth repellent will help win the battle on this front.

Silver fish attack rayons and starchy sizing in fabrics and books so these articles should also be prepared for storage as described above and generally dusted with fresh pyrethrum or silver fish preventative powder before storing. The treatment described for clearing the closet or storage space of moths should also take care of any silver fish which should be present.

Do you know where in Washington I can locate a good leather upholsterer? I have a large platform rocker, a family piece some 40 years old, which is badly in need of recovering. It is overstuffed and all leather-covered except, of course, for the platform part. It has been recovered in its time, but in another and distant State. I'd like to consider either dark red or green, but may decide on the natural leather color. How much do you think it would cost to have a good job done?

A. M. R.

Look under "Upholsterers" in the Yellow Pages of the telephone book for a firm to upholster your chair. There is at least one firm listed there which specializes in leather upholstery. The cost of the job will be determined by the grade and amount of upholstery you use, and all firms doing such work are glad to give an estimate before undertaking the job.

In reply to M. M. A., who inquires about sock-tops for crocheted rugs in your column recently, the Lynchburg Hosiery Mill at Lynchburg, Va., has tremendous bags of sock-tops that can be purchased for $1 a bag. They can be had in all white or in bags of multi-colored sock-tops. One bag will make a rug about 3½ or 4 feet by 2 or 3 feet.

MINCEMEAT BROWNIES

1 cup brown sugar
1 egg (or 2 tablespoons of dried egg, mixed with 2 tablespoons water)

Mix ingredients in the order listed. Bake in square, greased pan at 350 degrees F. for 25 minutes.

I would appreciate a method for removing body odor from clothing.

H. B. R.

Washing is the only way to get all the perspiration and resulting body odor out of clothing, but of course this isn't practical with many types of material. Sometimes, however, small portions of the dress such as the underarms can be sponged to take out perspiration. Many cleaners will do this for you upon request. Powdered pepsin also helps to remove underarm odors. Material must first be sponged with warm water to which a few drops of vinegar have been added. Then sprinkle on powdered pepsin (sold at some drug stores) and rub it well into the cloth. Let stand one or two hours, keeping the spot moist. Then brush off the powder and rinse well.

Sift the flour in a bowl and break into this the three eggs. Add sugar and mix well. Pour in the milk very gradually, mixing constantly for about five minutes.

Gently butter a frying pan and put it on the range. When it is hot, pour into it about 2 ounces (4 tablespoons) of the batter. After two minutes of cooking, turn it over and bake it on the other side, also for two minutes. Place the pancakes on a hot plate and cover them up.

Fill French pancakes with currant jelly (bar-le-duc), heat them in a chafing dish, sprinkle with powdered sugar, pour brandy over them and let it burn for a few minutes before serving.

What's Smart After Five?

See Spadea Sunday

Anything goes—within limits, of course—when it comes to your cocktail, dinner and theater wardrobe for this season. Today's smart "5 to 10" styles are the subject this week of "Fashion Telling by Spadea," the new clothing feature in The Sunday Post.

Post Fashion Editor Peggy Preston describes silhouette, fabric and color by top designers. Jean Spadea, famous New York artist, illustrates.

Wintertime Foods Will Be Studied In Red Cross Class

Food for the wintertime is the subject of two new Red Cross Food Cost Workshops for which registrations are now being taken.

The six-lesson course shows how to make fullest use of seasonal protective foods in order to keep your family healthier this winter, says Mrs. Frances Chapin, assistant director of the Red Cross Nutrition Service.

Discussion will include how to plan meals and buy to best advantage, safe ways to reduce your milk bill, preparation of vegetables and salads, what to do with leftovers, how to make the most of a small amount of meat, and desserts that are healthful and appetizing.

A two-hour evening class will be held on Thursday nights at 7:30 o'clock. It will meet once a week for six weeks. Daytime classes will be held on Mondays from 1 to 3 p. m. All classes meet at Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts ave. To register, Call Mrs. Chapin at Hobart 6800, extension 19.

Dancer to Be Guest At Indian Embassy

The Ambasador of India and Lady Rama Rau will have as a guest for the weekend of October 30, Srimati Rukmini Devi, noted Indian dancer, who is the initiator and moving spirit of the Kalakshein India, a growing movement for Indian cultural renaissance.

Under the patronage of the Ambassador and Lady Rama Rau, the artist will give her only Washington recital in Pierce Hall on Saturday, October 30, at 8:30 p. m.

She is the outstanding exponent of the classical dances of south India, which trace their origin to the Vedas themselves. At one time these dances were practiced entirely in temples and on religious occasions but fell into the hands of professional dancers and languished in disrepute.

G. O. P. Women Organize In Prince Georges County

Republican Women of Prince Georges County, Md., have organized 15 Dewey-Warren-Weidemeyer units throughout the county to make women more conscious of their right to vote and to bring them to the polls in November.

These units invite voters to meet their candidates and talk informally with them. The main efforts of the units are concentrated around the more populated metropolitan areas of Prince George's County.

An Ounce of Prevention

With so many colds prevailing, the wise mother takes precaution with her well child in order to ward off germs. Nose drops should be used before retiring and a good gargle would not be amiss. Be sure the child is having proper elimination and keep her system clear with many fruit juices and very few sweets.

The Child's Art Work

All children are proud of the drawings that are made and hung on the walls at school and naturally wish to hang them up when they are brought home. If the wallpaper is new in the child's room and you don't care to have it full of tack holes for these transient drawings, stretch a piece of tape across the room and pin the drawings to it. This will require only two thumb tacks in obscure places.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Mechanical Age Comes To Silver Spring

Since the Silver Spring parking meters have been in operation, James Doten has grown mighty weary of writing receipts for people who get parking tickets.

Doten is desk clerk in the Silver Spring police station. And every time the meters tattle on an overtime parker, it means more work for him.

The other day Jim was headed for lunch at the Tastee Diner, 8506 Georgia ave. A few steps away he noted two cars parked by red meters.

Wearily, Jim dug into his pocket, came up with two nickels, and with an air of satisfaction dropped them into the two meters.

"Now maybe I can enjoy my lunch in peace," he mused. "There are two guys I won't have to bother with for a while."

REMINDER

Did you remember to send in a check for the second half of your District income tax? This is the last day for it.

Unless, of course, you're one of these forehanded people who pays the whole thing on April 15.

PIED COMEDIANS DEPT.

When our man Povich was in Cleveland for the series, he did a piece about the show put on by "Lou Abbott and Bud Costello."

B. L. Tesh of 752 Silver Spring ave., Silver Spring, Md., was first to complain that Abbott is "Bud" and Costello is "Lou."

I confronted Povich with these inescapable facts when he came back to what he laughingly calls work, after the series. Shirley didn't bat an eye.

"Look," he said. "When those two guys put on their 'who's on first' routine, as they did in Cleveland, anybody can get mixed up. It's a wonder I didn't switch the last names, too, and call them Bud Abbott and Lou Costello."

How's that again, Shirley?

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four healthy kittens, 10 weeks old." (Emerson 8893).

"Male and female kittens, 2 months old." (Wisconsin 9865, 8 a. m. to 6 p. m.).

"Housebroken kitten, black, and cute as can be. But she makes her master wheeze and sneeze." (Ordway 2761).

"Adorable 6-month-old kitten, loves children, housebroken." (Axminster 7708).

"Three male kittens, 11 weeks old." (Republic 4142, Extension 2838; 8:30 to 5 on weekdays, 10 to 2 on Saturday).

"Well-mannered 6-week-old kitten." (Wisconsin 3737).

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I live in the 70-cent taxi zone, and am perfectly willing to share my cab in order to earn the group rate of 40 cents.

Very often a hacker will come along in the morning with a cab full of children, friends or relatives. He'll pick me up, go blocks out of his way to take the kids to school, delay me further by dropping his wife or friend off at work, and then he'll take me to my destination.

But invariably he'll charge me the full fare, because the other passengers were non-paying guests.

I don't think that's right. Do you? M. R. Van C.

Dear Mrs. Van C.:

It's definitely not right. The law says that if the cab is occupied by more than one person (other than the driver) group rates shall prevail.

It makes no difference whether the other passenger travels only one block, or if it's the driver's grandmother. Group rates prevail.

Every hacker in town is required to pass an examination based on these regulations, and I'm sure the drivers are familiar with them. Any time they overcharge you, they're deliberately taking advantage of you.

If the driver earns a tip, and the passenger wishes to pay full fare voluntarily, there's no reason why he shouldn't. But the driver who demands his tip should be dealt with firmly.

Ask for a receipt, note the license number and report promptly to the Hack Inspector, National 4000. That'll cure them.

Bill.

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. Laura J. Jackson, 2817 N. 23rd st., Arlington, Va. You're right; a new artist took over the strip several months ago. There have been a number of instances of such changes in well-known comics, and few readers have ever noticed them.

MISCELLANY

If it weren't for unpaid bills, homeless kittens and typographical errors, I'd probably never get any mail . . . Mrs. T. E. Levow of 5308 Pard rd. se. wonders whether inflation is worse than we think. One of our afternoon contemporaries recently offered electric heating pads for $399 each . . . And J. C. Runyon of 503 North West st., Falls Church, Va., is intrigued by the July 1 Federal supply schedule, put out by the Bureau of Federal Supply. It lists law books and "periodiodicals"—not once, but twice, with the same spelling used in two different kinds of type, just for variety . . . Margaret C. McVean of 314 North Carolina ave. se. reminds me that we ought to mention St. Peter's Annual Carnival, to be held in the Church Hall, 2d and C sts. se. for four nights, starting 8 p. m. October 20. The following night will be "Old Timers Night" . . . And the Washington Chapter of the Ladies Auxiliary, Jewish War Veterans, will hold a get-together at 3147 16th st. nw. (8:30 p. m., November 8) with the profits earmarked for good works at Mount Alto and Walter Reed . . . Wonder how we're going to squeeze into parking meter spaces when the new cars get a few inches longer . . . I suppose every columnist talks to himself, and it's nothing to worry about. But here recently, I've begun listening to myself—and that's a bad sign.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Herbert Bayard Swope heard this story from Rudyard Kipling, whose brother-in-law was aboard the British ship involved, at the beginning of World War I. War correspondent Raymond Gram Swing was aboard, that dark, warm night at sea—so warm that he slept on deck. Suddenly, out of the blackness, a U-Boat came up alongside. A German officer shouted, through the darkness, the customary call for ship-identification: "Who are you?" And, as if it had been a personal inquiry, came the answer: "Raymond Gram Swing of the Chicago Daily News" . . . "Go back and wake up your skipper," the U-Boat officer said, "and tell him in 20 minutes I'll sink him, the ship AND Raymond Gram Swing of the Chicago Daily News."

The last plane-load of Czech refugees to reach the American Zone in Germany stepped out of the plane with their hands up. They had been warned, in propaganda campaigns intended to discourage the exodus, that Czech refugees who arrived in the American Zone of Occupation were being shot on sight.

A. Brandon-Thomas, son of the author of "Charley's Aunt," recently was visited by Ethel Cudmore, who played a leading role in the original production. Miss Cudmore, now 79, told him that during the first act on opening night she stood in the wings and watched the show. She became so absorbed that she leaned back, and accidentally touched a button which brought the curtain down. "You're fired," the producer told her. "After tonight you're fired" . . . "But I stayed on," Miss Cudmore said, "because the play was such a hit, he forgot he fired me."

A group of Hollywood officials will try to halt the import of a French film, "Artists' Rendezvous," financed by Maurice Chevalier and made on the French Riviera with a 16 mm. camera. It shows at least 40 Hollywood figures in off-guarded play. . . . Judge Sam Leibowitz turned down MGM's offer of $50,000 for the story of one of his cases—because MGM also wanted the right to use his name in exploiting the picture. . . . The Dutch can't export their best gin to America because the trademark name is an obscene word in English. . . . Weary veteran interrogators in Germany now start their questioning: "And in what year were you forced to join the Nazi Party?"

Truman Seen Taking Ky. And Cooper

By Drew Pearson

Thanks to the most popular man in Kentucky, Senator Alben Barkley, the Bluegrass State will go for Truman in November. It will not elect a Democratic Senator—for two reasons.

Barkley

1. The Republican Senator, John Cooper, has had a good senatorial record and deserves to be reelected.

2. The Democratic candidate, frequently unsober Congressman Virgil Chapman, has such a miserable record that many Democrats are getting fed up with him. Thereby hangs some interesting inside history.

Shortly after Congressman Chapman won out in the primaries, a group of labor leaders approached Democratic Gov. Earle Clements in Louisville and told him that if he would get Chapman to support the Democratic platform they would give him labor's indorsement.

Governor Clements is largely responsible for getting Chapman the senatorial nomination, but when he asked his protege to support the Democratic platform, Virgil refused.

When President Truman's train came through Kentucky, however, it was a different story. Chapman hung on the President's coattails from beginning to end. And all the way across the State, Truman and Governor Clements begged Chapman to say he would support the Democratic platform. Each time he refused.

"I will not give up my position as an independent statesman," Chappie kept repeating.

"Won't you promise to support Truman?" pleaded Governor Clements.

"Only when I agree with him," replied the would-be Senator, who for once appeared to be cold sober.

"Will you promise to support Barkley?" countered Clements.

"Not even Barkley will ride on Virgil Chapman's coattails," replied the Congressman.

"All right," shot back the enraged Clements, "If you think you are such a damned statesman just paddle your own canoe from here on out."

Since then Governor Clements has ignored Chapman's campaign and has concentrated on Truman and Barkley.

Some Twisted Facts

In yesterday's column it was suggested that not all the issues in this campaign are getting a fair airing before the public. Following this up, here are some facts the public deserves to know about:

Twisted Republican facts: Governor Dewey plus other GOP leaders have heaped criticism on the Democrats for failing to clean the Communists out of Government. This is an important issue.

However, on March 16, 1947, J. Edgar Hoover testified that the two States with the largest number of Communists were New York with 30,000 and California with 8553, giving them 52 per cent of the Nation's card-carrying Communists.

The Governors of these two States are now running for President and Vice President of the United States.

Twisted Democratic facts: Attacking monopoly in Louisville, the President stated: "Three steel companies own 59 per cent of all the ingot capacity of the United States."

One of these companies is the giant U. S. Steel Corp. And in Louisville Mr. Truman ignored the fact that his own Administration helped increase U. S. Steel's part-monopoly when it sold the Government-owned steel plant at Geneva, Utah, for 20 cents on the dollar. The Justice Department's antitrust division strongly opposed this sale to U. S. Steel on the ground that it increased monopoly. However, the antitrust division was overruled by higher-ups.

Another of the three companies referred to by President Truman at Louisville is Republic Steel. But he also forgot that his own Administration increased Republic's monopoly trend which he so vigorously criticized.

The Truman Administration has given Republic Steel for a song steel facilities which cost the Government 155 million dollars. The Government's South Chicago plant, costing 92 million dollars, was sold to Republic for 27 million dollars, while the Government allowed Republic to lease a wartime blast furnace at Gadsden, Ala., and then close it down for more than a year—despite the tragic need for pig iron.
